Big Incomes, Cheer Up
The Franc Goes Up
A City in Danger
A Very Safe Planet

Current Events

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1925, by Star Co.

GOOD NEWS for the big incomes that pay, some of them, a 40 per cent. surtax. Thanks to good management by President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon, the government income will be much bigger than the outgo, and the income surtax may be cut down as low as 20 per cent.

Another cut like that and the biggest men will feel able to take some real money out of their corporations, instead of ploughing it back into the corporation and getting an occasional stock dividend, mercifully tax free.

THE FRENCH FRANC continued to recover in value yesterday, showing for two days in succession that it is risky business to sell French money short.

The French are able and, above all, logical. They do not deceive themselves with inflation nostrums. Those that seek to produce a panic in French money should remember that the French do not indulge in panics easily. Leave the franc alone.

THIS SHOULD INTEREST real estate owners in big cities, also heads of banks and other big corporations:

General Mitchell testifies before the Congressional committee that flying machines and destructive chemicals such as are now made in quantity, could level New York city in one day, destroying with ease every important building on Manhattan Island.

How big a ransom would the city pay to avoid that? More than the cost of a good fighting air fleet, certainly.

THE FRENCH ARMY has tested and approved a new stabilizing device for airplanes without the use of gyroscope. That means one step nearer to absolutely safe flying, safer than any mode of travel on land.

Ten to twenty years should see the end of long distance rail travel and of ocean surface travel. Wise real estate investors will make their plans with the flying machine in mind.

FOGS, FLOODS, extraordinary rainfalls in the East, destructive high winds in the West, trains late, roads washed out, houses blown down, and gales raging over western Europe, seem to justify Mr. Reidt's statements that his prediction of the world's end almost came true. In the South, many colored people attribute weather phenomena to the recent eclipse.

THE WISE MAN feels that with an ocean miles deep on both sides of him, absolute zero all around him, only a thin protecting atmosphere, and living on a planet with blazing fires inside of it, sailing around the sun at a speed exceeding 1,500,000 miles a day, he ought to thank Heaven for his marvelous safety, and not complain about a little extra rain or wind.

THE PRINCE OF WALES, whom Americans recently made very welcome, is interested in a plan to send British students to this country. That is common sense, as well as a pleasant compliment.

The Rhodes scholarship system, that now sends American boys to British universities, will be reversed in the new plan. The way to establish peace is to increase intelligence. When nations know each other, they will compete instead of fighting.

The flying machine, that will soon make travel around the world simple and cheap, ought to help civilize us. To see other nations makes you admire or pity and want to help them, instead of hating them.

A MAN in the Sing Sing death house, sentenced to die next month, hangs himself. Doctors work over him for hours, trying to bring him back to life, without success.

The dead man, who had killed six, burning them to death for revenge, writes the usual letter

MILL OWNER GOT $50,000 ON I. O. U.'S, PROBERS REVEAL

Kingston, R. I., Feb. 18.—A search was started today for the "man behind" Miss Maude E. Tefft, who wrecked the Peoples' Trust Company of this town, of which she was secretary and treasurer.

A prominent Rhode Island mill owner is said to have received large loans from the woman banker and church organist, in return for which he gave her notes or I. O. U.'s without any collateral.

The authorities are also investigating week-end trips made by Miss Tefft to Boston, where she stopped at the Copley Plaza hotel.

Attorney General Sisson has been furnished with names and addresses of brokers through whom Miss Tefft claims to have lost part of the missing $110,000, and efforts are being

RUSH OPERATION ON GLORIA SWANSON

Paris, Feb. 18.—Gloria Swanson, famous American film star, was hurriedly and mysteriously removed from the Plaza Athenne Hotel at 1:30 o'clock this morning and taken to a hospital, where it was said an operation was performed.

Miss Swanson recently became the bride of Marquis de la Faise and attracted international attention by declaring that ideal happiness meant a family of at least eight children.

Her new husband is a very rich man.

Film friends of the Marchioness and her husband gathered at the St. Lazare station to bid them farewell in their scheduled departure on the 10:05 a. m. boat train to catch the liner France for America were astounded to learn from officials of the French Line that Miss Swanson had been operated on and was in a hospital.

Miss Swanson's two children and their governess caught the boat train per schedule and will sail on the France.

Dr. Vaudescal operated on Miss Swanson. The operation was entirely successful.

The operation became suddenly necessary as a result of Miss Swanson's continual rehearsing of a film scene which necessitated her falling off a horse, which resulted in injuring her. Gloria's condition is complicated, however, by an operation she underwent two years ago."

According to Mrs. Ramsdell, her husband entered the house while she was sitting with her young son on her knees. She battled with the kidnaper, screaming for help, but he succeeded in wrenching the boy from her grasp.

In scant attire the boy was taken to a waiting automobile and quickly driven away. Mrs. Ramsdell told police her husband now lives in Gardner.

DR. MARION BURTON DIES AT ANN HARBOR

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 18.—Dr. Marion Leroy Burton, president of the University of Michigan, died today. He had been ill since November. Dr. Burton placed President Coolidge in nomination at the Cleveland convention.

Attending physicians announced yesterday that a new complication had been diagnosed as steptcoccus pleurisy.

Overwork was the direct cause, his physicians said. Pneumonia developed and was stubborn in the face of medical treatment. Heart and kidney complications ensued, dragging Dr. Burton close to death several times during the Winter.

WILL GO TO NEWPORT, SAYS MRS. BUDLONG

New York, Feb. 18.—"Out of the bedroom by Saturday" was caught up as a slogan today by watchful detectives, despite the failure of "Uncle" George Wilson, 74-year-old relative of Mrs. Jessie M. Budlong, to argue her out of her self-imposed imprisonment in her husband's apartment.

The slogan was inspired by a note, flung from the East Seventy-second street window of the bedroom where she is holding the fort, and in which she said she would have to open the locked door by Thursday, Friday or Saturday.

Another attempt to argue his niece out of Milton J. Budlong's apartment was made today by Uncle George, who came over from Newport for the purpose. He is a lawyer whose home

MRS. COTE WILL TAKE WITNESS STAND IN OWN DEFENCE TODAY

Portland, Me., Feb. 18.—A denial of the confession of Charles Henry Fielding, who said he shot Alphonse Cote of Gorham at the instigation of his wife, Mrs. Lottie Freeman Cote, was promised today when the women takes the stand in her own defence.

It has been indicated the contention will be made that Fielding's act was one of personal vengeance and not a love killing, and that he is a man of such mental shortcomings as to be incapable of telling the truth.

Fielding pleaded guilty to first degree murder and became the star witness for the State when the trial of himself and the woman whose suitor he was said to be opened here in a crowded courtroom.

Admitting he shot Cote to death, Fielding told the jury Mrs. Cote nagged him to slay her husband until he was finally driven to it against his will. The defence promises to throw an entirely different light on the mitive for the shooting.

The cross-examination of Fielding today by Attorney Harry E. Nixon, indicated that the claim would be made that bad blood had long existed between Fielding and Cote.

FIELDING ADMITS ROWS.

Attorney Nixon got Fielding to admit that he had had several quarrels with Cote as a result of one of which he considered getting a warrant for Cote's arrest for calling Fielding's wife a vile name.

Asked if he expected clemency because he pleaded guilty to the murder, Fielding replied:

"I made up my mind after the murder that I would have to serve a long term and I feel that way about it today."

Fielding admitted that on the night of the tragedy he and Mrs. Cote kept a tryst after the children had gone to bed.

This was within a few hours after Fielding says he and Mrs. Cote's son, Ralph, had buried the body of the slain man in the corn field. The body had lain since early morning concealed b yunderbrush and fresh cut boughs in the strip of woods where Fielding admits he shot down Cote while pursuing an imaginary deer.

EMBRACED OVER PLOT.

An odd phase of the case was that every time Fielding and Mrs. Cote discussed the murder plot, according to his story, they indulged in affectionate embraces. Fielding gave the impression that this was the manner in which Mrs. Cote spurred him to commit the crime.

Fielding was sharply interrogated by Attorney Nixon about a visit to his cell in the county jail by Susie Sanborn, Mrs. Cote's seventeen-year

DELAND SAYS PONZI COLLECTED 9 MILLION

Charles Ponzi went on trial today in Suffolk Superior Court on indictments charging larceny of $9,500 from seven persons. Ponzi acted as his own counsel. A jury was chosen in short order.

Assistant District Attorney Frank S. Deland said one of the documents to be introduced by the government would be a copy of the postal union treaty. He said Ponzi collected $9,000,000, and if he was really planning to do a coupon business he would have had to buy 180,000,000 coupons.

John A. Badaracco of No. 1874 Beacon street, Brookline, testified to talking with Amato Cataldo, then visiting Ponzi, who explained he was sending American money to agents in foreign countries who would buy reply coupons and return them with all profits.

Badaracco said Cataldo next gave him $500 to invest, that Ponzi paid him a commission of $50, and he then became a Ponzi agent.

MRS. BUDLONG PROMISES UNCLE THAT SHE WILL GO TO NEWPORT

would trust him where she has been staying at the Newport home of the Budlongs.

He intended taking food to Mrs. Budlong today, in the belief that she would trust him where she has been suspicious of others offering sustenance.

UNCLE'S FIRST VISIT.

His first visit to the detective-guarded apartment in which Mrs. Budlong has ensconced herself, proved fruitless as far as carrying out of purpose was concerned.

The elderly lawyer, wrinkled, stooped and with voice trembling in excitement, sent his cracked voice wavering through the keyhole of the locked bedroom.

"Jessie, it's Uncle George," he said. "I've been to see your lawyer and he says he can't do anything. Just open the door, Jessie, and come on down to Newport. Aunt Margaret's there waiting.

"We got nervous, Jessie, fearing you might have got in danger, and the old lady's so fidgety she can't sleep. I think you've won your point, Jessie, and you might as well come back to Newport. Do you hear me, Jessie?"

A sound came from within and a delighted fire flashed from the old man's one eye (he has lost the other) as he crouched, with his ear glued to the keyhole.

"By Jiminy, it was her voice," he laughed happily. "There can't be any question about that."

WILL JOIN THEM LATER.

Mrs. Budlong's voice came louder: "Uncle George, I know what I'm doing and you don't. I know just what I'm doing. You go back to Newport and tell Aunt Margaret I'm all right. I'll join you there later."

"Well, Jessie," quavered Uncle George's voice again, "if you say you know what you're doing and it's something I don't know about, then I guess it's all right. I'll go. Don't let them do anything to you, Jessie."

It was a short time later that Mrs. Budlong, leaning her kimona-clad figure far out of the bedroom window, flung down another of her husband's shirts, containing the newest note. The garment was a boiled shirt at that, making two the oll man is now minus.

REJECTS ALL OFFERS.

Detectives in the apartment reported today that "a mysterious woman in black" visited the apartment and offered to bring food, which she would eat together with Mrs. Budlong as evidence of good faith that the edibles had not been poisoned.

Mrs. Budlong voted the proposition down on a single ballot. Then a messenger arrived with a note offering aid from Dr. Nona S. Gould of the Murray Hill Hotel, classmate of Mrs. Budlong at Vassar. This also was rejected.

LARGE PHONE SAVINGS ARE LISTED

Continuing his plea before the Public Utilities Board today for a $12,000,000 annual increase in revenue for the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, Robert F. Estabrook, general traffic manager, declared installation of improved equipment is saving the company $2,390,000 yearly. Estabrook cited six instances of this economy now in practise.

He said $460,000 in operating labor was released by substitution of prepayment coin box public telephones for the post-payment type. A saving annually of $340,000 in labor is represented in the substitution of meters for tickets for individual measured telephones, the witness stated.

Introduction of audible ringing signals, whereby the "A" operator need not come in on a line when there is a delay to tell the subscriber resulted in a $300,000 yearly saving in labor and a similar saving resulted from installation of a machine ringing system on "B" switchboards, the traffic manager said.

An improvement in cords on "A" and "B" switchboards has saved $900,000 in labor, he declared. Introduction of narrow base keys on "B" switchboards brought an annual saving of $100,000 and an additional saving of $200,000 was made on equipment carrying charges, Estabrook told the board.

COLLINS' CAVE ENTRANCE IS SINKING

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 18 (Universal)—Floyd Collins sleeps today in the tomb he perhaps would have chosen, seventy feet down in Sand Cave. And there he will sleep forevermore. Nature, which has sneered and mocked at man's puny efforts to bring him forth, is taking further steps to seal his mausoleum beyond any possibility of his ever coming forth.

A great crack has appeared at the base of the cliff which overhangs the entrance to the cave. It is now six inches wide and the ground in front of the cliff seems to be sinking. Composed of treacherous shifting muck even before the rescue operations were started, the underground strata which has been disturbed by the sinking of the shafts and tunnels are again seeking to adjust themselves. It is likely that it will sink until all the natural passages have been closed.

Horrors of Collins' Death "Unthinkable"

Cave City, Feb. 18 (Universal Service).—If it were possible to total up the hours of agony that Floyd Collins suffered in the blackness of the rock crevice that became his tomb, his tortures would make such a compendium of horror as to be unthinkable.

Collins had been dead, when his body was reached from three to five days, Dr. W. H. Hazlett of Chicago, decided after he had made a careful and detailed examination.

That means that his last breath was gasped out last Friday or Thursday or Wednesday.

And last Wednesday was a week and a day after the last bit of nourishment and the final drop of moisture had passed his lips.

Dr. Hazlett prepared for newspaper correspondents a brief statement of the probable cycle of physical stresses through which the entombed man passed before there came the final blessing of the last unconsciousness.

EXPLAINS EMOTIONS.

The statement goes:

"The normal individual undergoes emotional strains when prone in cramped and dangerous positions. The absence of these emotions in Collins would save him from the great mental anxiety that others would naturally have if caught in straits such as the one in which he found himself.

"In the same circumstance you or I would perish from fear alone within a few days.

"After the first day or two, following the administration of the last nourishment, distress from hunger would not be experienced. Thirst would be most distressing at first. But this, also, would eventually pass away.

SUFFERING INTENSE PAIN.

"There would be intense pain as result of his cramped unchangeable position. There would be great pain at the points of his body pressing against the rocks.

"The temperature of the cavern where he was held was said to be fifty-four degrees. This would chill any person restrained from muscular activity.

"As the days passed exhaustion would progress until, finally, there would come periods of unconsciousness. The periods of mental clearness, interspersed, would be of a variable duration.

Carmichael Praises Crew of Diggers

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—The leader of the Floyd Collins' rescue shaft crew, H. T. Carmichael, gave the Coroner's Jury here the official picture of the two weeks' effort, during which he said:

"On February 4 I decided Johnny Gerald was the real man to get Collins out. I asked Gerald to pick a party to go in. He told me no sane man would attempt to go through the place after he came out that time. Men did things that all the money in the world would not buy.

"We started the shaft Thursday, a week ago. I feel that the shaft was the neatest of any other little job I ever saw. I don't believe another set of men in the United States could have done any quicker work."

Donations to the Floyd Collins rescue fund aggregated $3,756.91 up to Tuesday night, it was announced today by S. D. Caldwell, treasurer of the fund. Contributions were received from twenty-nine States and Canada. Of the amount $1,115.69 had been sent direct to Lee Collins, father of the victim, and turned over to the fund. Caldwell said $1,300 had been paid out. Money left over will be presented to Mr. Collins.

BRIDGE BUILDER HEADS ENGINEERS' INSTITUTE

New York, Feb. 18.—J. V. W. Reynders of New York City, steel bridge builder, today was elected president of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers at the organization's annual congress. E. De Golyer of New York City, representative in the United States of Lord Cowdray, British oil king, was elected first vice-president.

MILL MAN FACES ARREST AS A BANK WRECKER

made to apprehend and prosecute them.

Rhode Island State College was hard hit by the trust company's wrecking, between $20,000 and $30,000 of the college's quarterly collections being on deposit when the doors of the bank were closed. The college authorities admit they are facing a grave financial crisis, but expect to be tided over by State assistance.

The mill owner, according to Miss Teff's alleged confession, made away with $50,000 of the shortage.

PURCHASED FINE AUTO.

Today the town is still aghast at the disclosures and unable to reconcile the exemplary life of Miss Tefft with her misuse of the money entrusted to her.

As a singer in the choir of the Congregational Church and an active social worker, she had their deepest respect.

Her recent purchase of an expensive automobile failed to excite any suspicion. It was assumed that she had bought it with the funds raised by sale of telephone stock that she owned.

$100,000 ALLEGED SHORTAGE.

Governor Aram J. Pothier will require of Bank Commissioner George H. Newhall upon the latter's return this week from a stay on the Pacific Coast, a complete statement of the operations of the company.

Despite the fact that Miss Tefft's alleged misappropriations began two years ago, the examination of the books of the bank by agents of Mr. Newhall did not disclose any irregularities in the accounts last November, it is declared.

According to report from the bank commissioner's office Miss Tefft's stock purchases will total about $60,000 and her loans on notes withouut collateral to $50,000 additional.

ACCOUNTS TAMPERED WITH.

As a result of the wrecking of the bank the entire populace of the small town with the exception of several millionaires, said to be interested in the bank, is financially embarrassed.

College students and professors, farmers, store keepers, widows living on incomes, are without funds to buy food and clothing.

The larcenies committed by the $1,600-a-year woman bank clerk were about as daring as any ever unearthed by Pinkerton detective agents in their long list of bank wrecking investigations.

Not one depositor was neglected in the thefts by Miss Tefft. Accountants investigating the books at the bank found that the account of every depositor excepting her own, had been tampered with.

When Attorney-General Sisson was questioned concerning the condition of the bank, he stated that Edward Littlefield had been appointed receiver, but added that the receiver would have little to do in the way of liquidating assets.

"It is my honest opinion that the People's Trust Company will never be reopened and at this time I can see no hope for the depositors," he said.

It was reported that Miss Tefft would be offered immunity if she would turn State's evidence.

The wrecking of the trust company revealed that the woman was able to misuse the funds with ease. While the company's total assets in June, 1924, were listed at $175,000, the young woman succeeded in making off with all excepting a few thousand dollars. Most of this money was taken last November.

OVERDRAFT AT PROVIDENCE.

Miss Tefft had ready access to the funds of the bank. She had as much power to sign checks as the president and these checks when sent through the Merchants National Bank of Providence, which acted as clearing house for the trust company, were never questioned.

When it was discovered that the total balance at the Providence institution had dwindled, the bank examiners were called in along with the detectives. The fact that the balance had become low was discovered when on overdraft for $19,000 had been drawn on the account of the People's Trust Company.

The officials of the Merchants Bank notified Charles J. Green and he called a conference of the directors. Miss Tefft was called in and questioned. She answered all questions without any sign of fear. She calmly told the officials that she had made a loan of close to $60,000 and had secured no collateral. She stated to the officials that the loan was safe and that the money would be returned within a few days.

BORN IN KINGSTON.

Miss Tefft, a native of Kingston, is a woman of refinement and of a good reputation. She resided in an apartment over the quarters occupied by the bank, which is in an old Colonial structure. Her mother and two brothers reside in Wakefield.

She is a graduate of South Kingston High School, and after working as a bookkeeper became assistant town clerk at South Kingston. In 1918 she relinquished that position to become identified with the Kingston Trust Company.

declaring his innocence. But "suicide is confession." An innocent man would wait until the last.

THE INTERESTING FEATURE of this death in the death house is the violent effort to resuscitate the man after he had strangled himself. The law said he must die, why not let him die?

He will appear in the other world with bruises on his neck, instead of the burns on head and leg that usually come out of that house.

What do the higher powers above think of the corpses that we send up from our gallows, electric chairs and lethal chambers? How much better does our civilization seem up there than that of the ancient Mexicans that ripped out the heart of a living human sacrifice, offering that as a welcome gift to their gods.

How do our gifts to the Goddess of Justice impress real justice?

A PRISONER sent to life imprisonment joked and asked the criminal ahead of him to "step on the gas," meaning to walk faster. That man had stolen an automobile, it was his fourth offence and meant prison for life. Is that the best that human intelligence can do in the way of correction?

The suggestion, that such prisoners be allowed to volunteer as subjects for experiment in brain surgery, might be worth trying.

OUR PENAL INSTITUTIONS for "reforming criminals and teaching them to respect the law" are not a complete success. You read news from the Federal prison at Atlanta. The chaplain, cornered, confesses that he got $10,500 from rich bootleggers, divided the money with the prison authorities and thus the bootleggers bought "soft berths" in the prison.

ALSO, BOOTLEG PRISONERS were invited to play poker with prison officials, at $50 limit, the officials using marked cards, and thus acquiring more of the bootleg money. You can imagine what profound respect for law and religion must fill the breast of the friendless, penniless convict, when he sees the solemn religious teacher selling favors for cash, and bootleggers gaining favor by losing at poker.

The lesson of reform that we teach criminals is "Be a bootlegger, not a piker."

COOLIDGE GIVES $10 ECONOMY PRIZE

Salem Girls Shock Elite as Garter Bells Jingle

ESTATE IS ROBBED OF $3,300

Providence, R. I., Feb. 18.—Charged with embezzling $3,300 from the estate of the late Dr. James H. Briggs, of which she was executrix, Mrs. Meena B. Nye of No. 108 Wesleyan avenue, is under arrest here and held in $5,000 bonds. The woman, who is fifty-eight years old, entered a plea of not guilty.

Under cross-examination in municipal court Mrs. Nye admitted she used assets of the estate to aid a blind nephew in business. The business was a failure, she said.

The missing funds were the property of John Waterman of Auburn, a half brother of Dr. Briggs.

'SAFETY FIRST' TALKS FOR LYNN CHILDREN

Beginning today pupils in the Breed school in Lynn are to receive daily short talks from their teachers on the danger of walking on railroad tracks. This means is being resorted to in an effort to curb the practice of some of them of walking on the tracks of the B. & M. between the Raddin station and the school, a distance of about a mile, as a short cut to and from school.

ECONOMY PRIZE BY COOLIDGE

Washington, Feb. 18.—An economy contest with a $10 prize award, one of the results of President Coolidge's economy program, closed today at the White House executive offices.

Mr. Coolidge, holding that economy should begin at home, recently inquired of Director Lord of the budget bureau as to how much of a saving should be made in the next year in the expenses of the executive offices. Director Lord is understood to have addressed the President that it ought to be possible to lop off $12,500.

Mr. Coolidge passed the word along to the office force and N. P. Webster, White House dispersing clerk, suggested the following notice to employes:

> Although this office has been putting into effect economy for the past two years, it is necessary that further economies be brought about. It is desired that every employe of the office take a personal interest in this matter and make at least one suggestion.
> As the official responsible in this matter, I shall be glad to award a prize of $10 from personal funds to the employe who submits the best suggestions for bringing about a reduction of expenses.

STAYS AT POST IN GAS FILLED ROOM

Elizabeth Melley, pictured above, is being praised today for her heroism in remaining at switchboard in Winchester telephone exchange where gas had leaked from broken main. Miss Melley put through an emergency call which saved herself and two associates from asphyxiation.

SCHOOL MAIDS SENT HOME FROM DANCE

Salem, Feb. 18.—It's really too dreadful. The faculty of Salem High School and the eminently respectable element of the community are scandalized.

Not since the days when the gibbeting of witches was a popular pastime has feeling been so intense.

Mercy!

If it had been New York, now, or Boston or some equally abandoned city.

But Salem, of all places!

Shudders are chasing themselves up and down the backs of the righteously indignant.

The scandal occurred at the class day frolic of Salem High School, with Salem's elect in attendance.

Everything was proceeding in a decorus fashion when the audience was amazed to hear the gentle tinkle of bells. Listening closely, they discovered that the tintinnambulation emanated from girl juniors each time a step was taken or a limb moved.

Certain of the unregenerate who were present applauded lustily, but the faculty were made of sterner stuff. An investigation was undertaken which revealed the shocking truth that the girls had fastened bells to their garters.

Little remains to be told, in the words of Frank Ward O'Malley. The offenders were immediately sent home in disgrace, and the faculty are now thinking up some fitting punishment.

ATOMS SIGH WHEN THEY ARE STIRRED

Amherst, Feb. 18.—A sound resembling a human sigh is produced when the atoms of iron are stirred by a magnet placed near the metall, Professor S. R. Williams of Amherst College announced today. The sound, he said, was detected by a very sensitive amplifier used in a series of experiments aiming to corelate the changes of the length of steel when it is magnetized and the noise produced by magnetization.

The application of the principle of amplification to the study of magnetization has been made since the war, Professor Williams said. An apparatus consisting of two terminals planted in the earth will be used by belligerents during the war to catch telephone conversations of the enemy.

ESKIMO DOG TO SEEK HONORS AT SHOW

These New England Winters do not make much of a hit with a North Greenfield Eskimo dog, but Kywear, owned by John M. Jaynes, No. 89 Oxford street, Somerville, is trying to make the best of it in his attempt to win a blue ribbon in the Eastern Dog Club show at Mechanics Building next week. Kywear's owner was the chief engineer in the McMillan expedition which returned from the Far North a few months ago. He is shown here with his husky pet.

PHONE GIRL IS HAILED AS HEROINE

Miss Elizabeth Melley, night telephone operator at Winchester, blushed today under a shower of encomiums for her heroism in saving two other night operators and herself from asphyxiation when gas leaked into the telephone exchange.

The other two night operators on duty, Mrs. Susan Kelley of Arlington, and Mrs. Ida F. Burness of Watertown, were overcome by the fumes and were it not for the courage of Miss Melley in remaining at her post, although herself nearly suffocated, both might have lost their lives.

Reeling in her chair, Miss Melley put through an emergency call to the police and collapsed when Patrolmen Burns and Roche burst into the telephone exchange through the front door.

The three operators were given first aid by the policemen and then were treated by physicians, after which they were sent home.

YOUTHFUL NEWLY-WEDS FLEE WRATHFUL PARENTS

Montclair, N. J., Feb. 18.—Ralph Gallucci, seventeen-year-old son of a wealthy Montclair family, and his fourteen-year-olds bride, Genevieve Vanderhoff Gallucci, daughter of Harry Vanderhoff of Pompton Lakes, remained in hiding here today from the anger of the girl's father, following her elopement on Sunday to Alexandria, Va., where she and Gallucci were married.

Vanderhoff said the marriage in Virginia was invalid in this State and that if he caught the youthful bridegroom he "would run him into the ground."

ODOR REVEALS CAR LOAD OF ALCOHOL

Brockton, Feb. 18.—A passerby in the Brockton freight yards smelling leakin galcohol, led to the discovery of three drums of high grade Belgian alcohol in a freight car.

An entire carload of alcohol had arrived at the yards and the consignees had removed all but the leaking barrel an dtwo others.

The police are still working on the case and arrests may follow, as the shipment is being traced.

FROTHINGHAM PUTS IN ADAMS MEMORIAL BILL

Barbour of Quincy received a letter today from Congressman Louis Frothingham stating he had introduced a bill authorizing an appropriation of $5,000 for the erection of memorials in Quincy to John Adams and John Quincy Adams. SAYS EX-MRS. SPRECKELS PLANNED YACHT TRYST

Constantinople, Feb. 18.—Counsel for Princess Chevekiar, in her action for divorce, told the court today that the yachting trip which her husband made with the former Sidi Worth Spreckels, now Princess Suad Chakiar of San Francisco was premeditated. When Princess Chevekiar met the couple at the dock on their return it was a great surprise to them, added counsel. Attorneys for the defence deny the yachting trip was a romantic episode. The court has ordered the former Mrs. Spreckels to produce evidence to offset the accusation.

Princess Toumanov Takes Leading Part in Cabaret Supper Dance

Weird Russian Music Heightens Color of Entertainment Held in Assembly Room at No. 46 Beacon Street

By Betty Alden

WITH the Lenten days of festal inactivity in the offing, society's pace follows in rapid tempo a crowding round of entertainment and ceremonial. What with last evening's Russian cabaret supper dance, the dance for Eleanor Mason at the Chilton Club, and today's musical afternoon staged by Richard Platt at his Lime street house, every coterie finds the moments more than filled.

THE RUSSIAN CABARET came up to every high expectation of the most ardent enthusiasts, and wrote a brilliant climax to the succession of unusual festivities crowning the late season.

A COMPANY of the ultra elect thronged the Assembly Room of No. 46 Beacon street and roundly applauded number after number, as the talents of the Russian stars were evidenced in music and dance.

THE ENTIRE PROGRAM was of one brilliance—as well it might be, with the Princess Toumanov, Prince Toumanov, Madame Savitskaya, Madame Berestneff and Madame Piankova appearing therein.

ENTHUSIASM RAN high with the opening, a balalaica trio with piano, Messrs. Berestneff, Groves and Duzelsky, with Prince Toumanov at the piano, making wild sad music on the softly wailing stringed instruments so fitted to the Russian airs.

AND AT THE END of the program the very rafters rang with the delighted shouts and plaudits that followed the spirited Caucasian dances done by Messrs. Shingis Han and Natirbov.

NATIVE COSTUMES of the Southern Caucasus, of white with brilliant blue trappings and furry white shakos, set off the dark Slavic good looks of the two young men, and they made a dashing picture in their sword dance.

Staff Photograph.

Mrs. Hendricks Hallet Whitman, one of smart society's absentees. She is spending the Winter in France and is not due back on this side for some time.

MADAME SAVITSKAYA'S numbers on the harp were a joy to hear, and she herself in white crepe heavily beaded was most pleasing to the eye. She is connected with the Boston Symphony, and formerly played with the Russian Imperial Music Society.

PRINCESS TOUMANOV sang the number, "Fortune Telling by Water," from "Havanshina," as the second feature of the thrilling program, and Madame Piankova in the white satin and fur court dress of a Russian princess was lovely to behold as she danced to the music of the balalaica trio.

TO NAME THE PARTICULAR high lights of an evening that fairly scintillated with star performers is no mean task. And none were more popular with the smart audience than Madame and Mr. Eiler with their Gypsy songs and music.

MADAME EILER wore the multicolored Romany dress and Mr. Eiler was in bright red satin and black velvet, most picturesque and quite the costume accompaniment for the merry airs.

PRINCE TOUMANOV held the audience enraptured with his artistry on the violin. And very loath were his hearers to desist in their applause and allow Captain Percy Creed, the master of ceremonies, to proceed with the program.

MRS. ROGER WOLCOTT was one of the many charmed with the Russians and their varied talents, and who showered much praise. She was with a group which included Mr. and Mrs. J. Lovell Little.

OTHERS NOTED OF the fashionable set were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Jr., Mrs. Bird in cinnamon brown with tinsel embroidery; Mr. and Mrs. Eben Draper, Mrs. Daniel De Menocal and Mr. and Mrs. Sohier Welch.

ELLA SNELLING and Mrs. Moorhead Patterson, Mrs. George Lyman, Jr., Mary Vinton Murray with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. Morris Murray, Miss Suzanne Dabney, Mrs. J. Lewis Bremer and Mrs. Augustus Thorndike, Jr., were of the assemblage.

ALSO MRS. EDWARD JACKSON HOLMES, very handsome in emerald velvet with golden brown tulle, Mrs. John Chipman Gray, and Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird. Mrs. Charles Fanning Ayer was a handsome matron in gray net with a cluster of roses at one shoulder, and Mrs. Maynard Ladd was in brilliant turquoise metal cloth.

BOTH NANCY AND JEAN PATTEN were there, the former in silver cloth and the latter in white. Janet Sabine, in a sheath-like black crepe, and Bess Armstrong, in vivid red, were of a table group with Mrs. Harold Coolidge playing the chaperone. Mrs. Coolidge was handsomely attired in a figured net showing robin's egg blue and deep rose tones.

I SAW MRS. CHARLES PORTER a stately figure in green crepe, and also Mrs. Oliver Wolcott, in apricot chiffon. Mrs. George Lee was in black with pearls, and Mrs. Manning Emory, to whom much of the success of the affair is due, was attired in black velvet with silvery-blue metal cloth.

SPEAKING OF MRS. EMORY, Mrs. Gardiner Davis and other of the moving spirits of Boston's first Russian cabaret, mention must be made of those two energetic members of the Russian colony to whom thanks are also due—Mr. Constantine Belash and Captain Michael M. Ousbensky.

AND TO PRINCE TOUMANOV and the Princess, and many others of the colony as well, who are, of course, much elated that their initial effort was so vastly successful.

NO AFFAIR OF RUSSIAN flavor is quite complete without the presence of that notable matron, Madame Jacouline, who was greeted on all sides by her hosts of friends. She was a delighted spectator during the entertainment, and later during the supper hour, when delicious Russian dishes were served in the candle-lighted supper room, she held a small court.

OF WIDE INTEREST and most important is the wedding day of Eleanora Winslow and Leonard Jacob, 2d, set—according to present plans—for Saturday next. The ceremonial will be performed in the early afternoon in the Leslie Lindsay Chapel of Emmanuel Church, the "Lady Chapel," so called.

THE CEREMONIAL IS to be rather small—the Lady Chapel is designed for a company of not more than one hundred and fifty—and there will be no ushers. On Tuesday next the young people are sailing southward bound for Chile, where Mr. Jacob has his business affiliations.

LATER PLANS, I HEAR, take them eventually to the Gem of South American cities, Rio de Janeiro. Much to the regret, of course of Miss Winslow's hosts of friends and connection in the ultra smart set here, is the news that the new home is to be established so very far away.

THE ENGAGEMENT, announced in January, came as a great surprise, just as Miss Winslow had elected to follow other smart set matrons who voyaged into the world of business. Mr. Jacob is the son of the late William H. Jacob and Mrs. Jacob, is a Williams College man and served as a junior lieutenant overseas in the World War.

HIS SISTER, FORMERLY Mary Jacob, first married "Dicky" Peabody, and later became the wife of Henry Grew Crosby, son of the Stephen Van Rensselaer Crosbys, and nephew of Mrs. Boylston Beal.

AS FOR THE DEBUTANTE set, they made merry at the Chilton Club in honor of charming Eleanor Mason, for whom Mrs. Charles Mason, her aunt, gave a dinner and dance, mainly for the young set.

MISS MASON IS the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Mason of Ipswich and Boston, and is much in evidence wherever and whenever the buds foregather, which is quite everywhere during this highly festal present season.

EMILY WOODS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Woods of New York, came over for the Mason dance, and will stay on for the dance Mr. and Mrs. G. Herbert Windeler give tomorrow evening at the Somerset Hotel for their daughter, Evelyn Windeler.

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH WOODS of Chestnut street are Miss Emily's uncle and aunt on the paternal side, and she is their house guest during her stay in town.

ELLEN FROTHINGHAM, daughter of Dr. Langdon Frothingham and Mrs. Frothingham, is assisting this afternoon at the tea tables for Mr. Platt's musicale. Miss Frothingham was a brilliant figure in black and white satin in checkerboard design, with white wig and patches—a Lady of the French Court—for the recent Fine Arts Ball which set every tongue talking of its beauty and variety.

SUZANNE APSEY, sister debutante of Miss Frothingham, and daughter of the Albert Apseys of Brattle street, Cambridge, also is to pour, and for the musical feast Mr. Platt provides Philip Bunker, pianist, and George Boynton, tenor.

LEON GORDON TO APPEAL 'WHITE CARGO' RULING

There's nothing "piratical" in the makeup of Leon Gordon, successful young playwright and actor, now playing the lead in his own play "White Cargo," at the Selwyn Theatre.

He's been charged with "pirating" his sensational play of white men in "Darkest Africa," and Federal Judge Knox in New York city held that "White Cargo" is based on the novel "Hell's Playground," written by Ida Vera Simonton, on whose legal action the court made its ruling.

But Gordon isn't worrying about it.

He's been up against the same sort of thing before.

He talked briefly about the litigation in his dressing-room just before the curtain rose.

"I've just heard of Judge Knox's ruling," he said.

"I do not wish to embarrass the court, the woman who brought the action, or the public, so I will refrain from commenting on the opinion handed down in New York.

"Just say, please, that I have asked my lawyers to enter immediate appeal from the decision. Many months ago we were confronted with a similar action in the courts of New York and an order for an injunction against me and an accounting of receipts from "White Cargo" was refused.

"Please just say for Leon Gordon that he's "pirating" no plays, nor plagiarizing. That's all now."

"White Cargo" is now in its second year on Broadway. And aside from the Boston company, ten others are playing to crowded houses all over this country and abroad.

BAY STATE STATION ON RADIO HONOR ROLL

Washington, Feb. 18 (I.N.S.).—The world's greatest radio "air police" are maintained at the United States Bureau of Standards. This organization, charged with the task of keeping broadcasters within their allocated wave bands, announced today that during the last fourteen months thirteen American stations have averaged less than three-tenths of one per cent. deviation from assigned frequencies. Honor roll stations included WSO, Marion, Mass.; WEAF, New York; WCAP, Washington, and KDKA, Pittsburgh. The bureau is perfecting instruments to determine the necessary distances between stations operating on the same power and wave length.

can be assured that there are no geographical lines in this contest. If you live up in Kohotchee, Maine, you have as much chance as any Bostonian. But you must get your answers in by the third day after publication of the Limerick you are competing in.

Professional poets on Beacon Hill, housewives in Dorchester and trekers of the Maine woods are, at heart, as one in wooing the muse in this grand poetic competition.

Every one has the talent for witty and poetic expression in you. All you have to do is to give it full rein.

Here is a game that calls for no "conditions" to be fulfilled to make you eligible. Many of you have served the poetic apprenticeship in the days when feminine pulchitrude first stirred you to love sighs. That is so much in your favor. Others of you have been moved to word effusions at the beauty and languor of the country in the Spring. Again, so much in your favor.

But there are thousands of you whose minds are stimulated by thoughts amusing and burlesquing. Then here's the very pastime to tickle and feed that mental turn. Whatever the extent and volume of your talent for poetising, versifying Whatever the etent and volume of and rhyming, the Boston Evening American will pay you for it.

Give full vent to this talent buried in every one of you and earn some of this easy money.

16 PRIZES DAILY.

A batch of it given away every day. Just one line and only one line will earn you $25 a day. Make the missing line rhyme with the first two lines and the money is yours. Besides, a stack of $1 bills will go to the next fifteen in line.

The very offer should make you break out into verse!

Don't write a complete limerick. Just one missing line is all that is required, but you may have as many as seven contributions, if you desire.

That missing line must have the right meter, be funny, if you make it so, and be in keeping with the rest of the limerick. It must be a line that rhymes with and brings to a happy conclusion the limerick supplied you. What could be easier?

It may take you a few days to get into the swing of the thing, particularly the meter-beat of the verse. But keep at it and you'll find it the merriest and most fascinating pastime ever. And watch your output improve and your wits grow more nimble every day.

Jot down that clever last line that comes to mind and mail it in to the Limerick Contest Editor. Here's why:

DEFENSE DENIES MRS. COTE PLOTTED HUSBAND'S DEATH FOR LOVE

FIELDING SAYS ACCUSED WIFE OFFERED AUTO FOR CRIME

old daughter, whom Fielding said knew all about her mother's urgings that he kill her stepfather.

Fielding declared that he considered Susie's only purpose in visiting him at the jail was to "pump" him to see what he was going to testify.

Q.—Do you think that was the purpose of Susie's visit? A.—What else could it be when she asked me what I was going to do?

At this point Attorney Nixon referred to a letter among the state exhibits. Fielding said it was not in his handwriting, but admitted he had dictated it to Detective Dodway. This letter was sent to Mrs. Cote under a sort of camouflage. It was dictated on Christmas day.

SENT CAMOUFLAGE LETTER.

It read:

"Dear Friend, I was glad to hear from you and glad to hear you are well. I have been awful sick and feeling fairly well just now.

"You ask me if I had some money. No, I haven't any at all. I would like to see Susie and talk to her. I may lose my place and everything else. When I feel better I will write more. Write soon and let me know what you want me to do. I also thank you very much for the candy. We don't get any over here. Goodbye,

"You know who."

Counsel for the defense then proceeded to show by this letter a communication between Mrs. Cote and Fielding and how she had sent him candy.

After declaring he had "diffihulty" in understanding some questions, Fielding was asked by Attorney Nixon:

Q.—Were you angry with Mrs. Cote because shre had told Cote about your attentions to her? A.—No, I didn't know anything about it.

Q.—You know Leo Bollier was not on good terms with Cote? A.—Yes.

Q.—Coming to that time you met Mrs. Cote in Gorham when she was with Bollier. Did you telephone to her or did she telephone to you? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—What did you meet Mrs. Cote in Gorham that day for? A.—For affection.

Q.—Did you ask Bollier to come to Portland with you to get a warrant for the arrest of Cote for insulting your wife? A.—Yes.

Q.—How did he insult your wife? A.—Called her a name.

Q.—Was there anything else Cote did that made you angry with him? A.—Not that I ca nremember.

Q.—There was that affair in July? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you say you made up and shook hands on that? A.—Yes. And we made up and shook hands on the other for which I was going to get a warrant.

Q.—Did you ever accuse Cote of abusing cattle? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever tell anybody that he abused his wife? A.—No.

HEARD COTE QUARREL.

Q.—Did you ever tell anyone that if Cote didn't stop abusing that little woman you were going to "mukkle" up with him? A.—No.

Q—Did you ever hear arguments between Cote and his wife? A—Yes.

Q—Did Boiller have any reason to take action against Cote? A—Yes.

Q—What was it? A—I don't remember.

Q—Did you seek the advice of a lawyer after that meeting in Gorham with Mrs. Cote and Leo Bollier? A—Yes. Judge Lyons of Westbrook. He told me I had better keep away from the Cote place.

Q—Did he tell you you ought to keep your wife away, too? A—No.

Q—Did he know your wife and Mrs. Cote were related? A—He seemed to.

Q.—Did Judge Lyons tell you to keep away after you had told him about Cote insulting your wife? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell Judge Lyons you were going to the Cote place any time you desired in spite of Cote? A.—I don't recall whether I did or not.

OFFERED AUTO FOR CRIME.

Q.—Did I understand you right when you testified that Mrs. Cote was so pleased when you murdered her husband that she offered you a house and car? A.—Yes.

Q.—What kind of a house did she promise to give you and your family? A.—A cottage.

Q.—Where was it to be located? A.—I don't know.

Q.—So you were not sufficiently interested in the reward she offered you to find out? A.—No, we didn't discuss it much. There were too many around.

Q.—But I thought yo utestified that Susie and Ralph knew all about it, that Roland was the only one who didn't know about the murder plot? A.—I mean that nobody knew what Mrs. Cote promised me. The fact that she agreed to give me a house and a nice car was a secret between her and me and we didn't talk about it in the presnece of others.

Q.—Did you ever receive an injury to your head? A.—Yes, while working on the Federal Court building.

Q.—What happened? A.—A wrench fell and struck me on the head.

Q.—Did you ever tell your attorney that injury did effect you? A.—Not that I can remember.

Q.—When did that happen? A.—It was while I was learning my trade as plumber. Thirteen years ago.

Q.—Was Mrs. Cote married when you first became acquainted with her? A.—No.

Q.—And the relations between Mrs. Cote and your wife have always been pleasant, almost like that of sister? A.—Yes.

Q.—After leaving the lifeless body of Cote out there in the field did you exchange affections with his wife? A.—I did.

Q.—What time htat night? A.—Between 9 and 11.

Q.—Can't you give us the exact time? A.—No I didn't look at my watch and I'm not going to lie because you try to make me say something that isn't so.

Q.—Im trying to make you tell the truth, God knows. A.—I don't know the exact time.

Q.—Wasn't Susie downstairs at the time? A.—No, she and the others had gone to bed.

Q.—But didn't you testify yesterday that Susie went up and called her mother who had gone to bed earlier? A.—She did and stayed up after her mother came down.

EMBRACE AFTER CRIME.

Q.—And then you adjourned to the pantry for your affections instead of using the parlor or dining room? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was little Freddie Cote upstairs that night, too? A.—Yes.

Q.—And Ralph and Roland? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you and Mrs. Cote shared affections in the pantry on the night of the murder? A.—Yes.

Q.—And did you go hunting with George Clement on the day after the murder? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you enjoy yourselves, have a pleasant time? A.—Yes, we enjoyed ourselves as best we could.

Q.—Did you ever throw a wrench at one of your workmen at Bonny Lake? A.—Yes. We had a litle argument.

Q.—After the murder did you have a feeling that you would spend the rest of your days in prison? A.—I had my mind made up that I was going to get a long term.

Mrs. Cote's so-called confession, a statement signed by her son after her arrest for complicity in the murder, was offered in evidence as one of the final shots by the prosecution.

In this statement Mrs. Cote claimed Fielding decided to "fix" Cote because Cote was "killing her by inches."

"You really welcomed his death at Fielding's hands and Fielding knew it?" Mrs. Cote was asked in this statement by County Solicitor Ralph M. Ingalls, who interrogated her at this time.

"He knew I wanted him (Cote) out of the way," replied Mrs. Cote. "He (Cote) told me that if I ever got a divorce from him, he would make it warm for me all my life."

MOSCOW PRINCE WINS HAND OF FOLLIES GIRL

New York, Feb. 18 (I.N.S.).—International relations between Moscow and Forty-second street were further cemented today by the engagement of Flo Kennedy, Follies beauty, to Prince Youcca Troubetskoy, nephew of the famous sculptor, and confidante to the late Czar.

Miss Kennedy, who is one of the most talked-of members of Ziegfeld's cast, met the Prince only three weeks ago. It was a case of love at first sight, her friends say. A few nights ago, the prince, entertaining in her honor at the Mirador, broke the news to close friends. It was agreed, it was reported, that the wedding would take place before Easter.

Miss Kennedy is a native of San Francisco. This is her second season with the Follies.

The Prince is a nephew of Pierre Paul Troubetskoy, whose masterpiece is a bronze equestrian statue of Czar Alexander III. at Petrograd.

BILL FAVORED GIVING POLICE MORE PAY

After voting to report a bill providing an increase to $2,200 a year in the maximum wages of Boston policemen, the majority of the legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs, in an unofficial poll, favored a bill giving Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson power to appoint 100 extra men over the head of Mayor Curley. The present maximum is $2,000.

The poll was taken at the request of Commissioner Wilson on his petition for authority to appoint 300 men. While the committee did not favor the increase in the number of men asked by the commissioner, the majority were willing to authorize 100 more patrolmen.

For some time past the Mayor and police commissioner have been at odds over the question of increasing the number of policemen. The Mayor has refused to give the permission which the present law requires, with the result the commissioner has planned to seek authority from the Legislature. Today's unofficial poll was the result.

It is understood a bill will be introduced immediately granting authority to appoint 10 0patrolmen.

JAP PUBLISHER VISITS HEARST BUILDING

Praises Spirit Behind Boston Evening American After Inspection of Plant

Nagataka Murayama, millionaire Japanese newspaper owner, and president of the corporation which publishes the Tokyo News and the Osaka News, with a combined daily circulation of more than 1,500,000 copies, and a party of Tokyo newspapermen and engineers, after a complete inspection of the Boston Evening American's new plant in Winthrop square, highly praised the spirit and enterprise behind New England's foremost home newspaper.

"The American's home is the finest newspaper plant we have yet visited in this country or Canada," said Mr. Murayama.

"Cleanliness and efficiency in your plant combined with your remarkable news-gathering facilities and mechanical equipment are factors in your record of achievement here in New England.

"The makeup of the Boston American, too, has won our complete admiration. We feel that your hundreds of thousands of readers must realize that in your paper they have a safe and reliable and attractive medium."

In the party were Mr. Murayama, Jazaburo Ishii B. B. Arch, architect of the Takenaka Komter, contractors; Tatsuo Esaki of the Tokyo News engineering staff and S. Kitamoto of the engineering staff of Mitsui & Company. They were escorted by Ray Willoughby of the Boston office of R. Hoe & Company, manufacturers of presses.

Frank S. McDermott, Waltham grocer, convicted on 117 counts of receiving stolen property and on two counts of conspiracy in connection with the theft of $30,000 in groceries from the United Wholesale Grocery Company of Worcester began to serve a three to five-year term in State prison today.

Led weeping from the East Cambridge court after sentence had been imposed by Judge Walsh, McDermott was in a state of virtual collapse.

Samuel Reines of Worcester, former receiving clerk of the grocery firm who was convicted as an accessory before the robbery and for conspiracy, was sentenced to 28 months in the House of Correction at Worcester.

JUDGE MORTON HITS TRUTH DIGRESSION

Not Impressed With Witness' Argument That Sometimes Lies Are Necessary

Digressions from the truth on the part of federal agents seeking evidence and arrests in liquor cases were frowned upon today by Judge James M. Morton, when the case of the British schooner Marjorie E. Bachman was again in federal court.

At one point in the trial admission by a federal officer that it was sometimes necessary to lie "in this business" caused Judge Morton to declare he did not care to hear any more evidence in the case. During a recess he agreed to hear the evidence of other government witnesses.

The Bachman was seized October 24 of last year by the Tampa, after government officers in a sea sled had purchased several cases of liquor.

John Glutsch, a special agent of the Internal Revenue Department, one of the officers in the sea sled, was the first witness called. He testified that twenty-five cases of liquor were purchased from the schooner, some twenty miles off Boston Light. It was necessary five minutes later, he said, to throw the great part of this liquor overboard because the sea sled would not "plane."

Asked if he did not tell Supercargo Harold Young of the Bachman the sea sled had a speed of only fifteen miles an hour, when in reality it could travel forty miles an hour, Glutsch admitted it was possible he did.

"You wouldn't tell a lie?" asked Attorney William H. Lewis, counsel for the schooner.

"Sometimes it is necessary in this business," answered Glutsch.

"This whole trip from beginning to end was a government expedition, wasn't it?" interposed the court.

Despite the untiring efforts of a picked crew of 150 wire repair men, complete service on the New England toll lines of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company out of Boston, will not be resumed for ten days or two weeks as a result of the fire which destroyed the toll test board in the Main exchange, officials of the company said today.

Books on Etiquette "The Bunk," Champion Dempsey Claims

Boxer Finds Himself More at Home in the Ring Than in a Ballroom

By JACK DEMPSEY

(As Told to W. B. Seabrook)

CHAPTER XXIII.

Etiquette is liberal, the Champion believes, since he saw the Duchess of Westminster, pictured above, at dinner and heard another Duchess use language that he would have been spanked for when a kid.

JACK DEMPSEY is proud of the fact that his friends in every walk of life consider him "a gentleman." He takes it rather seriously, and tries, I believe, at all times to live up to his idea of the true meaning of that appellation.

But he gives no credit to the "Book of Etiquette," which he and Jack Kearns bought and read together, soon after they first became famous and rich.

He had mentioned to me several times, with a grin, that they did buy such a book, and today I got him to talk about it in detail. Here is the story, in his own words:

"Soon after the Toledo fight Kearns and I began meeting all sorts of people, big bugs and swells, and it wasn't their fault if we sometimes felt embarrassed. They acted just like anybody else, but when we began to be invited around, to dinners and even to house parties, we used to feel worried and restless, if you know what I mean, for fear we might be saying the wrong thing, or eating with the wrong spoon. We had heard about the 'book of etiquette stuff, like everybody else, and we figured it wouldn't hurt us to get one and read it.

A DELICATE MATTER.

"The only book man I knew was a dealer over on Third avenue, named Sam Levinson, that I used to go bird hunting with. I had once bought a dog from him, but I never thought I'd buy one of his books.

"We dropped over one day, though, and told him what we wanted, and he said, 'Well, I've got about six, and you'd better look 'em over and pick out the one you want.' And we did. We were not in any hurry and we pawed through them for about an hour.

"You'd think I'm making it up for a joke—the stuff we found in some of those books—except that the books are there themselves, for anybody to read and know I'm telling you the truth.

"There was one expensive looking one that told almost on the first page about a woman that got into the Four Hundred by eating a live caterpillar on a leaf of lettuce. And there was one with a paper back, for a quarter, that said the way for a man to get into society and be a gentleman was to have two coats—seems he could make it with one pair of pants, but there must be two coats, and one of them must have a long tail.

"All of them went strong on the idea that when you were invited out to dinner you had to eat whatever was put before you, if it killed you. Then your hostess would ask you to come again. The book we finally bought and carried away, because it seemed to have a lot of sensible stuff in it, along with the bunk, told on the very first page how Julius Caesar got to be Emperor of Rome or something by eating rancid butter at a banquet.

"And in that same book there was another thing that was a scream to me. It said, 'When calling on a lady who receives him alone, a gentleman seldom lingers long if another gentleman puts in an appearance.' Fire escape stuff! I knew a guy in Colorado who would be alive today if he'd acted on that.

GOOD IN SPOTS.

"Of course, it was not all that kind of junk. Some of it was pretty good, I guess, except that you'd never be comfortable at a dinner or a party if you tried to remember all the things it told you.

"There's good sense for some of the rules—one of the smartest women I know eplained the why of it to me afterward. You don't leave your spoon in the coffee cup because it makes other people nervous for fear you'll knock it over with your sleeve and mess it all over the table. And you don't eat with your knife because it makes the others nervous for fear you'll cut yourself.

"Some of the other stuff is the bunk, though. It said you must always eat ice cream with a fork, and that you must never cut up salads. I've noticed since that the real ladies and gentlemen do exactly what they please about things like that, and that nobody pays any attention.

"My real kick on the book is that it sets down a lot of stupid things that you were supposed to say when you went to places, and when you met people, and when you went away. If you really talked the way they told you to, you might be a gentleman, but believe me, you'd be dull.

"Well, I got the book, anyway, and read most of it, and pretty soon afterward I got to know some of these society people better—and then I went down to a week-end house party with Mr. Samuel S. Vauclain outside Philadelphia, where they had Judge Gary, and Mr. Charlie Schwab and some other famous people—and pretty soon after that I went to Europe, and was having lunch with Lord and Lady Lonsdale, and supper with Lord Castlereigh and a lot of titled ladies, and swapping hunting stories with the Duke of York, and going to a grand ball in Le Tellier's house in Paris, where they had duchesses and princesses—and I gradually got through my head a thing that is doggoned interesting—and that is the real reason for my telling you all the rest of this stuff.

NATURE'S OWN COURSE.

"I found out that both in America and Europe, the real, honest-to-good ladies and gentlemen, the ones in big society, and whose families have been it for a long time—I found out that the real trick about them is that they do exactly as they please. They don't go ny books of etiquette. I saw the Duchess of Westminster, at a dinner in the Savoy, pop the whole of a squashy little cake into her mouth, like a kid at a party, and lick her fingers afterward—and everybody laughed and thought it was cute. And I heard an old duchess use language that my mother would have whipped me for when I was a kid.

"And, right here in New York, I saw a lady whose name is all over the society pages—it was at a lunch where they were talking about some big charity scheme she had for a hospital for crippled children—I saw her eat a piece of fish with a soup spoon. She didn't know what she was eating with, or what she was eating. She was thinking of something more important. And she could have eaten it with her fingers—and she would still have been a lady.

"It seems to me that if you want to see people acting the way those books say, you've got to see a certain kind of rich chorus girl, or you've got to see people who are afraid they'll be wrong, when they're trying to throw a heavy bluff that they're right—that they're the real thing.

"Of course there are show-girls that happen to be real ladies, and that's another thing. But no chorus girl who wants to be thought a lady would dare to act the way a real lady acts. And it's a little bit the same way with men—though men don't seem to care so much about such things.

"The best idea I've got of what a real gentleman is, is something I didn't get out of any etiquette book. I don't think I doped it out myself. I think I must have heard it somewhere, and that it stuck in my mind. A gentleman is a man who never rubs anybody else the wrong way—except deliberately. 'Never give offence, except intentionally.' I think that's the way I heard it, and it seems to me to cover the whole thing, if you figure it out.

BOMB AND GAS WRECK PITTSBURGH BUILDINGS

Pittsburgh, Feb. 18.—Three buildings in the Penn avenue wholesale produce district of Pittsburgh were demolished by a series of explosions early today with a loss of $125,000. Windows in a score of other buildings were shattered. Many residents of the district were thrown from their beds by the force of the blast. They escaped with minor injuries. After an investigation, Fire Marshal Pfarr reported he believed the first explosion was a dynamite bomb, set off in one of the buildings. This blast, he said, was followed by gas explosions.

WIDOW CLAIMS BODY OF SING SING SUICIDE

Ossining, N. Y., Feb. 18.—Mrs. Edna Ford of Brooklyn has claimed the body of her husband, William S. Ford, who committed suicide Monday night by hanging in his death-house cell in Sing Sing. An undertaker came to Ossining and prepared the body for shipment to Brooklyn today.

Mrs. Ford, who was reported yesterday to be dying from a malady that defied diagnosis, asked for the body by letter. She is penniless and without relatives, her friends said.

MUSSOLINI BETTER; SOON ABLE TO BE UP

Rome, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Premier Mussolini, who has been suffering from a slight attack of influenza was found by his physician today with a temperature almost normal and with the other symptoms of his illness, such as headache and rheumatic pains, almost completely gone. These indications gave Dr. Giuseppe Bastionelli, attending the Premier, the impression that the patient will be able to leave his bed.

FIN. COM. HEAD LAUDS MEDALS FOR FIREMEN

Will Arouse Keen Competition in Department, Says Judge Sullivan

"It is a splendid idea and has my hearty support," said Judge Michael H. Sullivan, chairman of the Finance Commission, of the plan of the Boston Evening American to award two fire fighters each year with diamond medals for meritorious service and also to give $100 to the wife, mother, sister or woman next to kin of the heroic fireman.

"This branch of the public service should be recognized," said Judge Sullivan. "It will tend to eliminate the idea in the minds of the firemen that they are being neglected when they have performed some meritorious deed of heroism, which they are doing practically every day without even a mention of it being made to the public.

"I am glad to see that the Boston Evening American will publicly recognize such deeds.

"The life of a fireman is not a pleasant one. He is housed in quarters most of the time and is exposed to all sorts of dangers while responding to fires.

"He has not the advantage of the policeman, who is about streets, mingling with the public and has something at all times to attract his attention and occupy his mind.

"He is decidedly unlike the policeman and the soldier in this respect. The latter vocations are affiliated with large groups of men, while the fireman must confine himself in some instances to less than a dozen of his fellow workers.

"I mention this fact because I think that the idea of the Boston Evening American in awarding these diamond medals will have a tendency to arouse a generous discussion and bers of the fire department. It wil sane competition among the members give them something to think about, especially the honor that goes with the award of such a medal as proposed by the Boston Evening American."

Bull Moose Bucks Machine; State Asked to Pay

Augusta, Me., Feb. 18.—Representative Bartlett of Bangor introduced a resolve in the Maine Legislature appropriating $500.18 in favor of Dr. Edward T. Murray of East Millinocket for damages done to his automobile as a result of a collision with a wild moose. The statement of facts accompanying the resolve says that on the night of July 2, 1924, Dr. Murray was driving between East Millinocket and Millinocket on a sick call, when, without any warning, a large moose ran into his car and demolished it.

PLANES NEEDED FOR WINTER DEFENSES

Maneuvres at Mackinac Show Attacks Possible Even in in Zero Weather

Camp Skeel, Oscoda, Mich., Feb. 18.—Equipped with a suitable number of fighting planes, the first pursuit group could operate anywhere within a radius of 400 or 500 miles of its base, and support itself without outside agencies, Major T. G. Lanphier, head of the mid-winter maneuvers being held here, believes.

In two days the first group har moved itself from its Selfridge Field home to a base here and then continued on 125 miles to fight an imaginary battle in defence of the Straits of Mackinac. Actual flying time from Selfridge Field, to the battle ground was little more than three hours.

Fighting planes are a necessity for Winter defence, the demonstration has proved in the opinion of its leader. Accidents due to cold weather are to be expected, Major Lanphier holds and auxiliary planes must be ready to take the place of those disabled.

Two frozen reserve oil tanks and a cracked expansion tank were the result of the first night on the lee of Lake Van Etten. Engine trouble developed on another after getting into the air, cutting the number of planes that actually took part in the maneuvres to six.

Champ Coffee Drinker Asks for Title

Washington, Feb. 18.—Claiming the world's championship as a coffee drinker, Edward Ostrander of Newark, N. J., applied today to Secretary Hoover for the title.

Ostrander says he drinks 12 cups every weekday and four cups on Sunday, making 7.764 cups a year. He has maintained this average for many years, according to his letter to Hoover.

The Department of Commerce figures show that the per capita consumption is approximately 500 cups annually.

LINCOLN'S LAST DAY TOPIC OF RATHBONE

Congressman Whose Father Tried to Shield Leader From Shot to Speak in Hub

The graphic story of the last day of Abraham Lincoln, culminating in his assassination at Ford's Theatre, will be told tonight at the Copley Ploza before the Middlesex Club by Henry R. Rathbone, Congressman from Illinois.

Grandson of United States Senator Ira Harris, one of Lincoln's staunchest supporters, and the son of parents who were Lincoln's guests and in his box when the assassin's bullet ended his career, Congressman Rathbone is called the best qualified man in the world to relate the circumstance.

On the night in Washington when Booth leaped into the Présidential box and shot Lincoln, the Congressman's father, Major Henry R. Rathbone, then affianced to Miss Harris, daughter of Senator Harris, attempted to shield the President and was badly wounded and rendered unconscious.

Congressman Rathbone is a Yale graduate and a graduate of the law department of the University of Wisconsin.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

LONGWORTHS CHOSE NAME OF APOSTLE

Mother of New Baby Is Sorry Her Brother Is Always Compared to T. R.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—Paul the Apostle always has been a favorite character with Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, it was disclosed today, and so she decided to name her baby girl Paulina. Another reason for selection of the name is that it will provide no odious comparisons with latter-day personages.

"Poor T. R. Jr.," Mrs. Longworth is said to have remarked, referring to her brother, Theodore Roosevelt, "Every time he crosses the street someone has something to say because he doesn't do it as his father would—and if he navigates nicely then they say it was just as T. R. would have done it."

So the baby, her mother desires, shall grow up with a personality of her own.

Cod Liver Oil Now in Tasteless Tablets

McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets

Greatest Flesh Builder

No more will weak, thin, unfortunate children cry in protest when the nasty, fishy-tasting, horrible-smelling cod liver oil is brought out.

Medical science progresses rapidly, and now you can get at your druggists real, genuine cod liver oil in sugar-coated tablets that young and old can take with ease and pleasure.

Even the run-down and skinny grown-ups, who ought to take cod liver oil, because it really is the greatest vitamine food and builder of healthy flesh in the world, will feel extremely joyful when they read this welcome news.

Of course, doctors have been prescribing cod liver oil in tablets under another name for several years, but it is only of late that one can walk into a drug store and get a box of these flesh-producing tablets just as easy as a bottle of cough syrup.

Thin, run-down, anaemic men, women and children who need to grow strong and take on flesh are advised to get a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets, and if you don't gain 5 pounds in 30 days just get your money back.

One woman gained fifteen pounds in five weeks, according to her own doctor—another [illegible] pounds in three weeks. A very sickly child, aged nine, twelve pounds in seven months, and now plays with other children and has a good appetite.

Just ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets. Any good druggist will tell you that they are wonderful flesh and health builders. Only 60 cents for 60 tablets, and don't forget that they are wonder workers for feeble old folks. Be sure and get

Borglum to Carve Huge Washington, Lincoln Statues

(Copyright, 1925, by I. N. S.)

Washington, Feb. 18.—The largest monument in the world will be carved out of one great block of solid granite in the Black Hills of South Dakota, it was revealed today by Gutzon Borglum, who is now sculpturing the "Glory of the Confederacy" on Stone Mountain in Georgia. He will begin the Black Hills memorial next Spring and expects to complete it in four years at a cost of $1,000,000 to $2,000,000.

It will consist of stupendous figures of Washington and Lincoln 400 feet in height—Washington as he was at Valley Forge, a great silent figure in campaign uniform and cocked hat; Lincoln, bareheaded, with his hand resting on Washington's shoulder.

"These two typify American history—Washington, the builder, and Lincoln, the saviour of the Union," said Borglum.

MOTHER CALLS ON TEACHER WITH KNIFE

Charges Girl Was Punished, So Drives Instructor Behind Locked Door

Springfield, Feb. 18.—Incensed over the alleged chastisement of her young daughter, Mrs. Marie Stabalo, thirty-one years old, of No. 114 Wilcox street, today armed herself with a butcher knife and made her way to the Pynchon school, to remonstrate with the child's teacher, Mrs. Mary Foley.

When Mrs. Stabalo reached the schoolroom she drew the knife and advanced upon Mrs. Foley. The teacher fled to another classroom, locked the door, and telephoned to the police station across the street. Police found the mother trying to force the door. She was arrested on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Mrs. Stabalo said her daughter came home in tears, saying she had been struck with a piece of rubber hose.

THANKS

To All Who Have Written to Me About Irish Aid

I received letters from all over New England

It is gratifying to find that the old spirit is still alive. I have heard from a great many people who read my "IS IRELAND SUFFERING" article in last week's papers. Every man, woman and child who wrote to me thanked me for publishing the appeal and all hoped that something would be done in an organized way to send aid where needed. I would like to hear from some of the "old-time" leaders and others who are in possession of the facts about the present living conditions in Ireland—men who have organized Funds in the past and who understand how to operate quickly and efficiently. Let us do something worth while.

STOKES READY WITH CASH ON HELEN CLEWS

Letter Read at His Trial on Charge of Plot to De-Defame His Wife

Chicago, Feb. 18.—Benjamin Harrison, negro bathhouse attendant, testified today in the trial of W. E. D. Stokes, charged with conspiracy to defame his wife, Helen Ellwood Stokes, that Stokes offered him $2,000 for investigations relating to a woman named Helen.

Harrison said Stokes told him it would be difficult to trace the woman, as she had been known as Helen Ellwood, Helen Underwood and other names. Harrison said that at Stokes' direction he went to Denver; that he also consulted marriage records in Chicago to learn if a woman bearing one of the names had, as Stokes suggested, married Al Austin, a "saloon man."

The State road into the record a letter under a 1920 date identified by Harrison as a letter from Stokes bidding him to make inquiry at a house in Chicago and whether any of the occupants were named Helen Underwood, Mrs. Sargent, Billig or Miller."

[illegible] Billig was named by Stokes as a co-respondent in his divorce suit in New York. Miller is the name of Mrs. Stokes' stepfather.

FINED $200 FOR HAVING WHISKEY AT HOTEL

Alexander Sheinohn of No. 9 Allen street, West End, averred he was on business bent when he cached twelve bottles of "Old Mull" in a room of the Copley Plaza. But Managing Director Arthur Race told Police Inspector John McCarthy it didn't look right to him, for Alexander's suitcase was terribly heavy. The inspector discovered the whiskey and told Alexander his business was in court, where he was fined $200 today.

DARWIN THEORY MEASURE CAUSES ADJOURNMENT

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 18.—Public agitation over a bill to prohibit teaching of the Darwinian theory of man's evolution in State-supported schools attracted such a throng to the House of Representatives that a near stampede developed and the body adjourned its discussion of the bill until today.

There was talk of calling the police to cope with a situation which quickly got beyond the sergeant-at-arms, but it was decided to adjourn instead.

COUNT KAROLYI MUZZLED BY U. S.

Has $50,000, Jailed for Refusing to Aid Mother, 91

WIFE FEARS MISSING HUSBAND SLAIN

Mrs. Ernest D'Costo and her baby son, Ernest, Jr., of East Boston. She fears her husband, now missing, has been murdered. Police are seeking a former sweetheart of the young wife. Friends say this ex-suitor had threatened to kill her husband.

Special Officers James J. Driscoll and John Dunleavy of East Boston police station are searching today for a man, whose name they refuse to divulge, but whom they believe may be responsible for the disappearance of Ernest D'Costo, World War veterans, and resident of East Boston.

D'Costa has been missing since last Wednesday night. He was last seen on a Boston Elevated train at Maverick square by James orman, secretary of Fitton Council, K. of C.

The missing man left his home shortly before midnight to report to the milk barn of the H. P. Hood Company in Charlestown, where he had just been employed as a route man.

The first information Mrs. D'Costa had of his disappearance came when the Hood people called early Thursday morning, inquiring as to her husband's whereabouts.

The man sought by the police is a former suitor for Mrs. D'Costa's hand. Family friends say this man threatened to kill D'Costa at the time of his marriage, but that soon afterward he left Boston.

He returned recently, it is said, and took up his residence in East Boston. Police say he visited Mrs. D'Costa last Sunday and remarked that if her husband did not return he still was willing to marry her.

Mrs. D'Costa is in a state of collapse. She is living with her three children, ranging in ages from three months to five years, with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Frank White of No. 229 Marion street.

KAROLYI MUZZLED BY U. S.

Pledge Not to Discuss Hungarian Politics Here Voluntary, Officials Declare

The right of free speech, guaranteed to American citizens under the Constitution, has been denied a distinguished visitor, Count Michael Karolyi, former President of Hungary, according to dispatches from New York today.

In consequence the Count, whose beautiful wife was a visitor to Boston last December, is unable to defend himself against attacks said to have been inspired by the government of Admiral Horthy in his native land.

When Countess Karolyi, whose illness from typhoid fever brought her husband to her side, arrived in this country, her admission was bitterly opposed by S. Stanwood Menken, formerly head of the National Security League, on the ground she was "a Red Catherine of Bolshevism."

SPOKE IN BOSTON.

His charges were disproved by government investigation and the Countess started on a lecture tour, which was to have ended in March. At that time she expected to return to London, where her husband and three children awaited her.

Shortly after her appearance in Boston, where she spoke at Ford Hal, the Countess was stricken with typhoid fever, and also underwent a major operation.

Count Karolyi hurried to her bed side, but, according to the New York report, American State Department officials in London would not vise his passports until he pledged himself not to write or speak for publication on any political matters during his stay.

The restrictions were said to have been imposed at the instance of Count Laszlo Szechenyi, husband of the former Gladys Vanderbilt, and now Hungarian Minister to Washington.

CALLED "CONSPIRATOR."

Officials in Washington were quoted as saying Count Karolyi volunteered the pledge, but that they expected him to conduct himself accordingly while here.

The Count's friends declared there is no precedent for such action and stated that while the former head of the Hungarian republic is muzzled, he is being attacked by Hungarian papers in this country, by Stanwood Menken and others.

Karolyi is termed in the Hungarian press attacks a Bolshevist and a danger to this government, a traitor to his own country and a conspirator to turn his country over to Bela Kun, a Communist.

MATINEE IDOL BREAKS MORE HEARTS

From left to right, Pola Negri, Lou Tellegen and Alla Nazimova. For a time it was rumored that Lou might wed Pola. Anyway, Tellegen picked another lady to be Mrs. Tellegen No. 3.

Arrested as Slayer

New York, Feb. 18.—Vincenzo Cello, thirty-three years old, of Mount Vernon, was arrested charged with the murder of James Ricardo, a prosperous truck farmer of Mount Vernon, whose body was found in a deserted house on his Bronx farm.

MRS. TELLEGEN NO. 3 ALSO AN ACTRESS

Los Angeles, Feb. 18 (I.N.S.).—The "mystery bride" of Lou Tellegen, famous stage and screen star, former husband of Geraldine Farrar, was revealed to International News Service as Isabel Craven Dilworth, twenty-two, daughter of a multimillionaire glass manufacturer of Philadelphia.

Miss Dillworth, after graduating from Ward-Belmont, exclusive Nashville, Tenn., school attended a dramatic school in New York and later was accepted for a role by Tellegen in the stage version of "Don Juan."

A bond of affection, born of the throbbing love story of "Don Juan" brought the romance of Tellegen and the young actress which ended in their midnight marriage in New Jersey.

Mrs. Tellegen is a niece of Charles Dillworth, internationally noted art collector of Chicago and has a sister attending Bryn Mawr.

Mrs. Tellegen is a niece of James Bell, Minneapolis flour king, granddaughter of Governor Dale of Virginia and a cousin of the Earl of Craven in England.

Tellegen was married in Rutherford, N. J., December 17, 1923, the day following Geraldine Farrar's divorce.

And so the news has leaked that Lou Tellegen, once the "perfect lover" of "Jerry" Farrar, who divorced him because he courted too many other women, has signed another matrimonial contract.

Tellegen and Bride Reported "Missing"

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 18.—Historians of Hollywood's romances today were waiting for Lou Tellegen, actor of the stage and screen, to come forward and give his own version of his marriage to Isabel Craven Dilworth.

One report had it that the actor and his wife were in San Francisco. Efforts to find them there failed. It was agreed by their friends here that now the marriage secret was out, they would soon cease to be missing.

PILGRIM SHIP IS NEARING AZORES

On Board the Steamship Ohio (By Radio), Feb. 18.—Bowling merrily along at better than twelve knots an hour, the steamship Ohio, carrying 600 Boston pilgrims bound for Rome, under the leadership of Cardinal O'Connell, today is about 950 miles southeast of Cape Cod.

The dull foggy weather which had followed the ship since its departure from Boston Sunday night, gave way early today to bright sunshine. The weather is balmy and the ship steams through a sea of azure, roofed over by a bright blue sky such as is never seen along the New England coast.

The Rt. Rev. Mgr. Joseph McGlinchey was to deliver the first of a series of lectures on the ports at which the pilgrim ship will call. Monsignor McGlinchey was to speak today on "Funchal" in the Azores, which will be the steamship's first stopping place.

The general health of the pilgrim party is good. The bright weather today brought virtually everyone on deck.

Egg Shells Used to Trim New Spring Hats

London, Feb. 18.—Modistes have found use for ordinary egg shells. They make effective trimmings for the new Spring hats. The shells are broken into various shapes and are stuck on the crown in designs and sometimes in colors.

Egg shell hats are expected to be very popular at Easter time.

SON, FINED, PREFERS PRISON

Attleboro Business Man, Failing to Pay, Is Sent to the House of Correction

New Bedford, Feb. 18.—Because he refused to contribute to the support of his ninety-one-year-old mother, George Hemsey, a wealthy Attleboro business man, was today serving a term in the New Bedford House of Correction.

When found guilty of failing to provide for his mother, now in the City Home at Attleboro, Hemsey was fined $200, which was to have been paid to the city of Attleboro for the woman's support. Hemsey refused to pay the fine and was committed to the house of correction.

Hemsey and his wife are owners of property in Attleboro and Pawtucket valued at nearly $50,000.

He has repeatedly refused to contribute to his mother's support.

GERMAN DISARMAMENT NOT COMPLETE, IS HINT

Paris, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—The report of the Allied Military Control Mission, fifty pages long, on the state of Germany's disarmament, accompanied by twelve lengthy annexes, was delivered at the offices of the Allied War Committee, presided over by Marshal Foch, this morning. Copies of the documents were immediately forwarded to the allied governments.

The most important of the twelve annexes are those relating to military training and the number of men in Germany being fitted for armed service contrary to the Treaty of Versailles, and to German armaments. A mass of new detail is given in the report which in the judgment of those who are aware of its contents will prove abundantly the allied case against Germany.

YUSKO IS FAVORITE FOR FINISH MAT BOUT WITH LABRIOLA

GRAPPLERS FIT FOR TUSSLE

Frank Yusko, New England heavyweight champion, will start a favorite in his finish match with Leone Labriola, the Lion of Italy, at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night.

Fans who have wanted to know just how good the big Italian can wrestle will get the answer Thursday night. Labriola is large, strong, has youth in his favor and from week to week shows a decided improvement in his knowledge of the game. Still, it is a long shot if he can beat Yusko right now. Italian fans have a lot of respect for his ability, but the most of them figure he has been matched too fast in this particular case.

It will be a case where gameness will be the deciding factor in a victory.

Yusko is one of the few wrestlers who has met them as they have come since he came into the limelight. He realizes that Labriola is a tough wrestler, but he has shown a desire to please the fans ever since he started wrestling at the Grand and, realizing that what they want is real matches, he is willing to accommodate at all times by doing his best. His followers are planning a big ovation for him preceding the match and will turn out in numbers to give him their support.

The winner of this match pitted against the winner of a three cornered match between Stasiak, Malcewicz and Taramaschi would clear the local wrestling championship.

In the semi-final bout, Ole Jacobson, who is the champion of Norway, will wrestle one fall of a finish with Lawson Pinkham of Attleboro. Pinkham will have weight in his favor but Norwood fans think Jacobson is one of the best and will back him to win.

In the opening bout Frank Dutcher will meet a new comer on the Grand Opera House mat in the person of Mike Teleogn, the Ukranian light heavyweight.

Leon Burbanks will referee all the bouts.

BROWN IN BROCKTON FOR FRUZZETTI BOUT

Harry "Kid" Brown, the crack Philadelphia lightweight, arrived in Brockton today for his bout with Jimmy Fruzzetti, the fast Brockton boy, which will be the feature event at Music Hall, Brockton, Friday night. This team will travel over the 10 round route.

The Quaker is already in excellent condition but he will work out this afternoon and tomorrow at the Brockton Y. M. H. A. gymnasium so that the Shoe City fans will get a line on him.

Jimmy Smith of Brockton and Jimmy Barry of Dorchester, a former Brockton lad, will clash in the semi-final of eight rounds. Harold Ellershaw of Brockton and Paddy McClosky and Manuel Canto and Eddie Neiley will clash in the six round preliminaries.

PRO HOCKEY SCANDAL CHARGED

Professional hockey is having its taste of scandal. The charges are that the Hamilton Tigers, who played the Bruins here last night, laid down to the St. Pats at Toronto last Saturday night and all Canada is agog over the affair.

The pro ice game has been remarkably free from suspicion, in the conduct of its games, while some of the amateur leagues in Canada have been in serious charges in past seasons and the Canadian fans are fervidly following the present case.

Percy Thompson, head of the Tigers is enraged over the charges, he intimates he might collect something more than that which goes with the National Hockey League play-off and the profits from the Stanley cup competition, if his team qualifies.

The charge that the Hamilton-St. Pats game was not on the level, was made in Montreal.

Those close to the pro hockey game believe that it is a case of sour grapes. The fact that the St. Pats are pressing the Canadiens with the possibility of shutting out Montreal from the N. H. L. play-off is given as one reason for the charges. Should the St. Pats overhaul the Canadiens, the play-off would be a Hamilton-Toronto affair.

Thompson has placed the matter in the hands of his attorney with a view to collecting damages if he can trace the source of the report.

Thompson branded as "false and foolish" the story which was in Le Canada, French-Canadian newspaper, that the Tigers gave St. Pats the game in order to keep the Canadiens out of the play-off for the league championship.

"You can tell the world at large that our boys tried as hard as they could," said Mr. Thompson. "We don't care who plays us in the final playoff, provided we get into it ourselves.

"Just now we are out making sure of our place at the top of the league. If we were going to throw any games we certainly wouldn't undertake such a course just when we need most to win.

"But, regardless of the fact that we want to finish at the top of the league and are doing our absolute best just now, the Hamilton team will never be rightfully accused of not trying."

'FIGHTING SCOTCHMAN' IN DILBOY BOUTS

On account of the approach of the New England championships, the amateurs are showing a real activity to get going, and the Boxing Committee of Dilboy Post, V. F. W., is in receipt of a large entry list for its show, to be held in K. of C. Hall, Somerville, Thursday evening.

There will be competition in the following classes, 118, 126, 147 and 160 pounds. The outstanding entry in the 126 pound class is that of Tommy Morrision, of Somerville, who is known as the fighting Scotchman. This boy has made rapid strides in the boxing game, and at the recent International Tournament, he captured the 126-pound class.

WILLS FORCING SHOWDOWN IN 'HEAVY' MIXUP

New York, Feb. 18.—There is every reason to believe that within the next few days the New York State Athletic Commission will seek a showdown in the heavyweight boxing situation.

For the second time Harry Wills, negro heavyweight, who has been pursuing the champion, Jack Dempsey, for years, has deposited a check for $2,500 with the commission to bind his challenge.

The first time the matter was left high in the air, but within the past year the boxing body has changed its tactics, having named one champion and arranged a tournament from which will come another.

At a recent meeting Chairman George Brower informed Wills' manager, Paddy Mullins, that in his opinion the challengers should fight among themselves until a true contender for the championship develops. Mullins, however, did not make known his opinion at that time.

From what happened at the meeting of the commission yesterday it would seem that the negro's business agent has adopted the view of Chairman Brower.

Boston University's hockey team is to play a rubber game with Boston College at the Arena sometime before the season closes. The Terriers feel they are entitled to another shot at the Eagles net and have requested Manager George Brown to arrange a third game. As it is both teams have won a game apiece.

REED LIKELY TO GET BOUT WITH FLOWERS

By JACK CONWAY.

Pal Reed, Framingham middleweight, will probably receive the next opportunity to tame Tiger Flowers. Lou Bogash proved that an aggressive fighter with a sock has a much better time of bringing the Tiger down than has a more resourceful ring man who lacks the resolve and determination that carries one to close quarters.

Flowers had the margin on Bogash when their contest ended, but he knew he had been in a regular fight. Reed is as aggressive as Bogash, also as fast and a harder hitter. There is more snap behind Pal's blows than there are behind those of Bogash.

Messrs. Bob McKirdy and Eddie Mack of the Commercial Club have Flowers signed to box on March 20. It was originally planned to have Johnny Wilson, former world's middleweight champion, test his ability against that of the Tiger. Wilson is willing to tackle Flowers again in an effort to even the score for the three-round technical knockout he suffered at the hands of the Southerner last December, but before doing so he wishes to engage in a couple of hard bouts so that he will be at his best when he goes into action with the Georgian.

Meanwhile negotiations are underway for a Flowers-Reed match.

THERE will not be any professional boxing in Boston until Jim Maloney of South Boston tosses some of his ponderous punches at Quintin Romero Rojas, Chilian heavyweight, at the Commercial A. C.'s show a week from tomorrow night.

The signing of Maloney and Rojas has brought peace and quiet to the minds of Bob McKirdy and to Johnny McGrath. At the time Maloney signed to box Sully Montgomery he gave the Commercial Club an option on his services for his next bout. Various opponents were suggested, but they failed to meet with the approval of both parties. Finally McGrath agreed to accept Romero Rojas and the match was made.

The Boxing Commission was asked to name Maloney's opponent, but, very rightfully, refused to do so. The commission merely announced it would not sanction a bout unless it was one that looked like an even affair. The New York Commission has at times made itself ridiculous by trying to act as matchmaker for clubs as well as the governing body of the ring game.

If everything goes well in the Rojas bout, Maloney, accompanied by Hambone Kelley and McGrath, will make a trip to California. By the time Summer arrives Maloney will probably be battling for big money in New York. He has the old wallop, which always has a popular appeal.

ANDY MARTIN, South End bantamweight, continues to bowl over the opposition. Johnny Harko of Manchester, N. H., was his latest victim. Martin shapes up as one of the most promising bantamweights in the country. He is managed by Billy Henderson and Sam Price, who are well versed in the fistic racket. Henderson has been responsible for much of the ring success gained by Eddie Shevlin, New England welterweight champion.

NEW ENGLAND fans would like to see a few more star boxers developed. The calibre of the local boxers right now is very low. Eddie Shevlin is the last of the old guard. Until recently Shevlin was always able to pack any arena where he boxed.

Jim Maloney and Jack Sharkey are the best of the new crop of fighters. But we need more ring men if the boxing game is to flourish here. There is too much suspicion attached to contests in which two boxers from outside places show in the feature match. When the going gets slow, the gallery gods immediately begin making reference to their pet phrase "in the bag."

We have known the fans to cheer bouts between local boys where each has a following where faster contests between outsiders have been hooted strenuously.

SPORT BROADCAST

ABOUT BOB QUINN

Bob Quinn hustling prexy of the Red Sox, makes no idle promises. He is doing everything within his power to give Boston a winning club, but as far as making predictions is concerned he is silent. He wants a winner. He confesses that it is a new sensation for him to be stringing along with a tail-end club and he declares rather blandly that he doesn't like it.

• • •

Quinn is a man who takes pride in his business. It is not all a money-making proposition with him. He wants to see his policies succeed and he wants others to join him in the glory when they do succeed. There is nothing selfish in his makeup. He is absolutely sincere. Any who have met him cannot doubt this.

AN IMPRESSION

Our impression of Quinn is that he feels he is not doing things quickly enough to suit Boston fandom. He seems almost impatient in his desire to do almost anything to please. But let us allay Bob's fears right here and now. Every Boston fan knows the mess Frazee made of the Red Sox and they also know that a wrecked organization cannot be rebuilt overnight. They doubtless feel as we do, i. e., Quinn has made progress in his one-year reign at Fenway Park and they are willing to wait for the better times which seem bound to come with a man of his type at the helm.

BOB QUINN

A story that Quinn told about himself at a luncheon at the Parker House yesterday best illustrates his character.

"When the Red Sox were losing last Summer," said Bob, "I wanted to be alone at all times. When I reached home at night I wanted to get out and walk. I wanted to argue it all out in my own mind. I became so uncivil finally that I couldn't even reason with myself."

There we have the real Quinn, taking all the blame himself, feeling that he alone was responsible and trying to "dope" a way out of it.

16 NEW FACES

Quinn is taking sixteen new men to the New Orleans training camp next week. They are the best his scouts could garner. He doesn't know whether they are wonders or blunders, but if he can get one or two good men from among them he'll be satisfied. As Scout Hugh Duffy pointed out yesterday: "One good man can make a big difference in a team," and we're hoping that there is ONE GOOD MAN in the Red Sox new lot.

Braves Sign Infield Rookie

The Braves have signed up Edward Smith, a young infielder upon the recommendations of Joey Connolly, former Brave outfielder. The newcomer is a Passiac, N. J., lad. He played with Connolly's Woonsocket, R. I., team last season, and is regarded as very fast and a fine prospect. He formerly played with Passiac High team, also with the famed Doherty Silk Sox team of Paterson. He will go South with the second squad of Braves early in March.

Yale's hockey team breaks into the picture at the Arena again tonight as part of the double bill. The Bulldog sextet takes on M. I. T. in the opening contest, while the B. A. A. and the Boston Hockey Club furnish the main attraction.

Howell Van Gerbig's decision to hang up his skates for the season because of the severe facial injury he received in Pittsburgh, is a hard blow to the fortunes of the B. A. A., but this loss is balanced by the return to the game of hockey's newest sensation, Hago Harrington, crack left wing, who has been on the shelf with a bad charley horse in his right leg.

There is little love between the B. A. A. and Hockey Club players and although the Unicorn would move into a top tie with the Pittsburgh Hornets in the event of a win tonight Jack Hutchinson's crew will go after their local rival from the first drop of the puck.

Although the Hockey Club has found the going very tough on foreign rinks this season, its men are at the top of their game when they play on the Arena surface. No team appreciates this more than the B. A. A.

The B. A. A. team leaves for Pittsburgh tomorrow night for a two games series, Friday and Saturday, with the Hornets. The locals are anxious to clean up the Hockey Club tonight and go into Smoke Town on even terms with Dinny Manners' outfit.

Hockey Notes

Fans who attend the Arena games Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights will be favored with a spectacular skating exhibition by the late stars of the New York Hippodrome, Miss Laura Jean Carlisle and Miss Freda Peterson.

The sensational comeback of the Boston College teams, as its victories over Loyola College, B. A. A., and Boston University indicates, has steamed up the host of Eagle followers who will generously support the team in its games with McGill University tomorrow and Friday nights.

The Dartmouth varsity squad will arrive here tomorrow afternoon to apply the final touches before their big game with Harvard Saturday night. Dartmouth graduates in Greater Boston will be well represented at the Arena for this game.

Manager Joe Sheridan of the Maples has forwarded a letter of protest to Secretary Roy D. Schooley of the United States League at his Pittsburgh office over the suspension of Captain "Brick" Morrison for his attack on Irving Small following the game with the B. A. A. last Friday night. Sheridan argues that the punishment is excessive and wholly without justice, since, he claims, Small was just as guilty because the latter is alleged to have provoked the assault.

FOHL DECLARES ALL POSITIONS ON RED SOX ARE OPEN

EVERY NEW MAN HAS CHANCE

By FRED C. LANE

"Every [illegible] on the Red Sox [illegible] as open as a book."

Manager Lee Fohl of the Red Sox made this startling statement at a dinner given the sport writers of Boston at the Parker House yesterday. "It is my intention to add speed to the club and I hope to get that essential from out of the sixteen new players that are going South with the club this Spring," said Fohl.

President Bob Quinn thinks highly of [illegible] Prothro, Washington player, who came here in exchange for Mike McNally.

"Fohl and myself are sure Prothro can hit," declares Quinn. "We have seen him do it and in addition he is fast on his feet. This lad Connolly from the Bay City team is fast on his pins also. It is just such players that we want. Somebody that can score from second base on a hit.

FAST MEN NEEDED.

"If you remember," went on Quinn, "last season a ball had to hit the flag pole before a runner scored from second. It is just such a state of affairs we hope to correct, and the only way to do it is to start in with a lot of youngsters and bring them along.

"It took about five years to bring St. Louis into the pennant contender class. Three new players were inserted into the line-up the first year, two the next and [illegible] until the team was strong enough to grab the runner up position in the league.

Manager Lee Fohl was head of the St. Louis club the year they staged that sensational rally that found lacking one game for the title. Both Quinn and Fohl worked together in the remodeling of the St. Louis club and they apparently succeeded.

SPEA KHIGHLY OF RALLIO.

President Quinn thinks so anyhow and figures don't lie. That perhaps accounts for the faith and the fast friendship that exists between Fohl and Quinn.

Scout Hugh Duffey spoke highly of Rudy Rallio, one of the new pitchers from the Pacific Coast.

"I spoke to Duffy Lewis about this fellow," said Hugh, "and also met a friend of mine that was unaware a deal was on. Both had the best to say of this kid. In fact Lewis considers him the best pitcher on the coast."

President Quinn broke in at this point and told how Duffy Lewis offered him a princely price for Rallio but Quinn had a gentleman's agreement with Owner Lane of the Salt Lake club and promised to send the lad back to his original headquarters should he fail to make the grade."

Inside Golf

By CHESTER HORTON

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

For the medium upright swing, which best fits the great mass of average business men golfers, take a left-hand grip which lets this hand fall into a natural position on the shaft with the first two knuckles showing to the eye. Bring the right hand to an opposite position and snug this hand up until the thumb of the left hand presses against the right palm. Overlapping [illegible] Start fairly erect and on the heels. It is best to place the clubhead back of the left ball and hold the shaft with the left hand only while taking the stance. As the right hand is brought in you will discover that the right shoulder must drop some to accommodate it. As this shoulder drops let the right knee bend inward toward the left knee. You then have Walter Hagen's position at the ball and you will at least look as if you are going to hit it. The [illegible] you are ready to start the back swing, is largely on your right foot.

WOULD AWARD STUDY POINTS FOR SPORTS

Dr. Walter Whittaker, vice-chairman of the athletic committee of the Somerville school board has come to the front with one of the best suggestions offered in some time for the advancement of sport. Dr. Whittaker was formerly a pitcher of fame, both at Somerville High and Tufts College, and has long been interested in sports.

His bill now before the board for consideration would give every boy that wins a berth on any athletic team representing the high school "two points a year toward his diploma."

His idea is novel, but not entirely new, having been considered by many of the leading athletic authorities of the country at times in the past. In support of his measure, Dr. Whittaker cites the distribution of points by high school for various subjects that are not taken up in the class rooms.

For example, at Somerville High two points are awarded any pupil that studies music under a competent teacher, one point is given each year for those that become members of the glee club, the orchestra or band and one-half point is given to class officers.

His theory is "that a boy in order to make good on an athletic team must give more of his time preparing and practicing than any of the students that follow the point award [illegible]."

"He is taken away from his books frequently, and because of his effort to uphold his alma mater, often finds himself lacking a point or two for a diploma," says the doctor.

President Cousins of Tufts is the first dean of any large institution of learning to come to the front in favor of the idea. He approves such a distribution of points and looks for the day when the idea will be taken up by all colleges in the country.

The scheme will go before the athletic committee for consideration at the next meeting. It will then be brought before the full board and voted upon.

Since nearly every member of the Somerville school board was at one time an athlete the matter is expected to receive favorable mention.

As the bill reads the coach and the superintendent of schools would do the point awarding. A rule of this kind would have a tendency to increase interest in athletics in every school [illegible], coaches would be looked upon with the same respect as are the teachers in the class rooms and it would give the lad [illegible] an equal chance with [illegible] student who devotes all his time to his books.

OLD TIME SPORT STORIES

by GEORGE V. TUOHEY

First organized effort to introduce soccer football in Boston was made in 1905

This is the 32nd of a series of articles on old time athletes by George V. Tuohey, famous sports promoter, who has been prominent in athletics for thirty-five years.

With soccer football enjoying a present day popularity that attracts many thousands of spectators to the South End grounds here in Boston, and with teams in many cities playing regularly scheduled championship games before great crowds it is hard to realize that it is but a comparatively short time ago that even the sporting writers did not know how to spell the name of the then new fangled game.

Was it spelt "socker," or "soker," or "sokar"? Nobody seemed to know definitely, so those who had to write about the game at the time spelled it any old way and let it go at that.

This was about the time that we began to hear of the coming of Sir Charles Kirkpatrick with an All-England team to make a tour of eastern Canada and the United States, the tour being primarily one of a missionary nature with a view to popularizing the sport in this country and our [illegible] to the North.

Merely a Pastime

True, the game had been played hereabouts by many teams made up of emigrants from England and Scotland, men employed in various trades, but it was especially strong where there were cotton and woolen mills, where these immigrants naturally drifted to seek work at their callings when they reached our shores.

But there was no organized effort to promote the sport, nor was there any governing body. It was looked upon merely as a pastime on Saturday afternoons and holidays between scrub teams, for the pure fun of the thing.

During the Summer of 1905 the news reached here that Sir Cecil Ernest Cochrane, a noted English sportsman and devotee of the sport had donated a $[illegible] cup to be played for during the coming months with local teams in [illegible] against a team headed by Sir Charles Kirkpatrick. This [illegible] already interested in the game to want a [illegible] and when [illegible] visitors showed [illegible] Boston on October [illegible] street grounds [illegible] to select the strongest [illegible] of an outfit to give the Pilgrims, as the English team was called, [illegible] and to bring out the real wonders of the game as a spectacular outdoor pastime.

Thoroughly Organized

The affair was [illegible] organized with a [illegible] committee consisting of [illegible] well known followers of athletics [illegible] among them being J. J. Taylor of the Red Sox, George Wright, [illegible] H. Clark, the all round athlete; [illegible] W. D. Sullivan of the [illegible] Walter Barnes, then with the Journal; W. E. Adams of the Herald; Harry Illsley of the [illegible]; Johnny Ma[illegible] [illegible] at the time [illegible] "Duke" [illegible] State Association Football League and Professor White of Harvard.

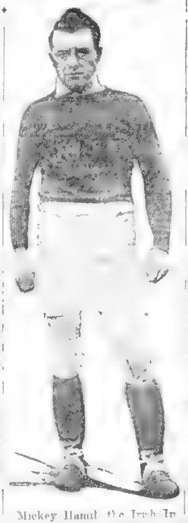
The Boston players' committee had Dunbar of the Boston Rovers, Nat Fraser of the Fire Rivers and J. Purcell, who [illegible] in the [illegible] the Boston team [illegible] the many [illegible] on the home [illegible] was finally settled [illegible] tion game, and from [illegible] ers making [illegible] the Boston group [illegible].

Enthusiasm Infectious

Sir Cochrane's enthusiasm over the game proved infectious, while his personal charm and magnetism won everybody, [illegible] who were skeptical [illegible] spirit of the thing [illegible] that it received [illegible] publicity ever given [illegible] up to that [illegible] out [illegible] or as he spelled it [illegible] replaced Rugby in the old country and that the finals [illegible] drew attendances running up to 100,000, which figures, I might add, has been increased until today there are as many as 150,000 present when the British finals are [illegible] so great is the interest [illegible] are [illegible] looked after.

The game here [illegible] surprisingly large [illegible] something [illegible] present in spite of [illegible] it was played [illegible] was so fast [illegible] different from anything we had ever seen, that it made [illegible] everybody [illegible] was established.

A [illegible] game had [illegible] been the attendance that addition after addition have been made to accomodate the increasing attendance.



Mickey Hamil, the Irish International, and a member of the Boston "Pros," is the type of player the Hub gloats over today—quite different from 20 years back when the game was hardly known here.

CORNS

Lift Off—No Pain!

[illegible] Freezone [illegible] instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers.

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of Freezone for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made syrup.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the throat tickle and heals the irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough, and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

TAKE SALTS IF STOMACH ISN'T ACTING RIGHT

Says Jad Salts Relieves Excess of Hydrochloric Acid

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather ferments, the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that Indigestion is caused by Hyperacidity, meaning there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach [illegible] the digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, waterbrash or nausea.

[illegible] of water before breakfast and drink it while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief often follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Don't Let That Cold Turn Into "Flu"

Rub on Good Old Musterole

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia unless you take care of it at once.

Rub good old Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief.

Colds are merely congestion. Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

As effective as the messy old mustard plaster, does the work without blister.

Just rub it on with your finger tips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief.

To Mothers: Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

her chair at the table at her in silence. He said 'I am Nora Lee. Are What's happened to excite n, nothing—nothing—only we at home too much. We'd get notonous. We ought to go around see things—keep up our inter s. We've not been dancing or to show in ages."

'Pretty soon now, Nora Lee! But aven't these months been darn weet even if you do try to fight with me now and then? Haven't hey been good enough?"

His hand reached across the table. A mighty gladness went thundering to her heart. He wasn't bored with her, wasn't finding her stale and commonplace and drab. This first year of theirs wasn't going to be any failure. It was a glorious sweet triumph.

Cost of Child.

She laughed softly. [illegible] what had suddenly made her so glad.

He got out a draughting board after dinner and began making sketches. "Look over these books, Nora Lee. Then we can talk about things. It's silly, but I like to argue about plans. Even if you don't say much it crystallizes my own ideas."

They were two books on architecture. She began to read them in a glow of excitement. After half an hour she let her glance wander to his face, intent, brown, strong, to his hands with their fine, vigorous fingers.

She thought of the talk over the card table—of Marjorie Cole complacently announcing that she'd decided to have a child. How could a girl blab that out before everybody? She wondered if she herself wished a child? Finding a hot uneasiness tugging at her heart, she began to read again.

They hadn't money enough, so of course, it was ridiculous to consider the question.

Working, Watching.

For the next month he worked every evening. She read and watched.

Sometimes she grew weary and restless and longed to rush out in the streets and walk miles in the moonlight—sometimes hours passed and the unbroken silence weighed like a canopy of lead.

Then she thought with alarm: "This may go on for years. I'll sit here night after night. I'll turn into a mute."

When he finally laid down his pencil he was often too spent to talk. He would say with a yawn, "I'll have it all doped out pretty soon. It's going to be good."

She felt like crying. Lying awake long after he was deep in sleep she thought: "I have no interest but him, none. His work counts more with him than I do!" And she was appalled to have openly admitted the truth she so dreaded.

The next night when he was preparing to work she said in a [illegible] her plea: "Dane—must you work every night? Oh, let us have an hour."

He grew pale and pushed the pencils from him and got up very slowly from the table. His hands trembled, taking hers. "It's for you that I'm working, Nora Lee."

Prisoner Wife

"Yes, yes, I know—but let us not put work above everything." She laughed with a touch of hysteria. "I feel shut out from you—I feel so alone."

His fingers tangled in her hair. He stooped suddenly and kissed her. "I don't mean to make things so hard [illegible] Nora Lee. I'm kee[illegible] [illegible] Wait till we get [illegible] the [illegible] Miss Herbert likes the plans. She's giving me free rein and that's pretty good because she understands designing—she's seen the best places through the whole of Europe—"

"She's traveled?"

"Everywhere."

"No wonder she's brilliant."

"No—and then the educated Russians are really educated. She speaks five languages, and all fluently. She can read a plan as easily as I. She makes good suggestions."

Nora Lee stacked one of the books she had been reading on top of the other. She did it a trifle viciously. She would liked to have melted all their knowledge and poured it swiftly into her head.

Resolutions

Walking down the hills toward the bay, she held his hand tight as a little child might. She made resolutions grimly. She would get up early, finish her work—study! She would go over her French—take up Spanish. She would try writing again, fill up her life with interests, be so fascinating that all the educated Russians in the world would have no glimmer of a chance to shine while she was aroused.

The next evening as she was rushing home late from a card party Natalie's limousine swept to the door. Nora Lee caught a rapt glimpse of a dark, vivid face framed with an immense collar of white ermine.

Far from the Madding Crowd

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

B[illegible] they are always [illegible] where [illegible] Babette and Susette take to the deep green [illegible] with [illegible] of wind through the lower aisles and corridors of the pines and needles musical with the splashing of sapphire and diamond water that washes the mossy stones, wakened at wide intervals by the flash and song of a scarlet tanager, broken out of its woodland drowse by the gentle, lonely tink-tonk of a cow bell.

They are hoping that perhaps they might meet Love there. But the Unusual Three dream of a [illegible] set apart from [illegible] the world even to [illegible]. No place is deep enough and lonely enough and countryfied enough to be too hard for Dan to get at. If you've got any come-hither at all he'll find you!

BEAUTIFY THE NAILS

By Maria Jeritza

Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company and One of the Most Beautiful Women of the Day.

THERE'S nothing more satisfying to one's sense of cleanliness and comfort and daintiness than the consciousness that one's hands are in good condition with well manicured nails.

A good manicure once each week and a few moments of care each day should keep your nails in the pink of condition provided you have the habit of taking good care of your hands.

By this I mean not only scrubbing them well when they need it with soap and water, but rubbing a good softening hand lotion at least once a day into your finger tips and nails.

This will keep the cuticle smooth and loosened and lessen the difficulty of giving yourself a good manicure. Or, if you have your nails cared for by a skilled operator she will bless you for lightening her labor and insuring good results by your cooperation.

When the cuticle is neglected and allowed to grow tight to the nail, the work of loosening and pressing it back so that the lovely half-moons are visible is actually arduous and fraught with danger of cutting the delicate skin. If these lumina are allowed to go into eclipse under your cuticle, the final result will be jagged skin and hang nails—a condition as ugly as it is painful.

One word of warning regarding the final polish of your nails! A delicate, glossy, pale pink is highly desirable. But the exaggerated shine and deep red tint that some over-zealous manicures achieve is [illegible] nor in good taste. AMPERITES AND

By M. A. SIMMONS
Technical Radio Editor

The proper filament control of the tubes used in any set determine to a large extent the results obtainable with the receiver. The average person operating a receiving set today overloads the tubes on filament voltage to obtain maximum volume. This results in shortening the life of the tubes, and also is apt to produce some distortion. Tubes are designed to operate at a certain filament voltage to produce maximum results, and any further increase although at times may temporarily produce more volume, shortens the life of the tube and changes its operating characteristics. This can be proven by the fact that the 199 tube may be operated on six volts instead of three, but after operating them for a while it will be found impossible to operate them with any results on three volts. Overloading tubes on B battery supply, also changes the characteristics of the tube.

Best results and continued long life can only be obtained by using the tube voltage specified by the manufacturer. The question of just how to properly control the filament, therefore, is of great importance. In the case of filament control by the use of rheostats, it leaves to the person operating the set the chance to overload the tube. Because of this human element, many set manufacturers have been seeking some device that would eliminate hand control of the filament voltage of the tubes. This tends to eliminate some of the chances for improper operating of the receiver.

Such a device is now on the market and produced by several different concerns. One of the oldest in the field is the Radiall Co., of New York, who produce their device under the name of Amperite, in other words, Right Amperes. This device is a perfect automatic filament control and eliminates the use of hand control rheostats, although they may be used in the set if you so desire. In case rheostats are used two will be required, one for detector tube and one to control the other three.

The Amperites were chosen because they have given satisfactory operation over a period of time, and because they are small and easily placed in the set. Each Amperite is fully guaranteed against defects. Special tests were conducted by the technical department of this paper to determine the full characteristics of the Amperites. Tubes of the same type, but having different operating characteristics were tried out to determine whether the Amperite would affect the tuning control of the set. One test was to bring a tube to the oscillating point and then change to another tube which had a different oscillating point to find out whether the Amperite would adjust itself to the characteristics of the new tube. It was

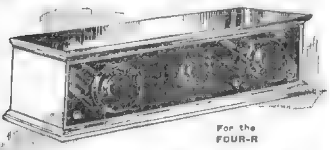
WHY DU PONT PANELS GIVE GREATER SATISFACTION

PYRADIOLIN IS NOT ONLY HIGHER IN RADIO QUALITIES BUT EASIER TO WORK AS WELL



For the FOUR-R

This wonderful panel material called Pyradiolin was developed by Du Pont Engineers. When tested at the Cruft High Tension Electrical Laboratories of Harvard it was proved to be exceptionally high in dialectric properties. It minimizes leakage and being non-moisture absorptive maintains maximum efficiency in wet weather or dry.

In addition, Pyradiolin has a lasting characteristic beauty and is as easy to work as a piece of soft pine, for it actually takes a wood screw without splitting.

You can buy Du Pont panels at most Boston dealers in the proper size for the Four-R or in other stock sizes—also Du Pont dials to match. [illegible] you, simply phone our Boston office.

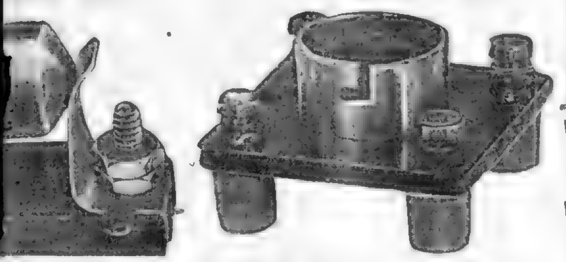
SOCKETS IN FOUR-R SET



SIGNAL IS AN IDEAL SOCKET

Many Radio Fans seem to be of the opinion that any old socket will answer for the set that they are intending to build. It is our opinion that a socket can make or break a new set. If the socket insulation is not of the proper material, a great deal of leakage will take place with a consequent loss in signal strength. This leakage a great many times may be heard in the phones, and therefore, spoils the quality of music.

Many fans do not realize that a good share of the scratchy noises heard in the receiver is caused by poor contact made between tube prongs and the socket springs. The ideal socket spring is made of phosphor bronze a very springy metal. The spring will always then return to position when the tube is taken out of the socket.

Cheap sockets have insulation made up of a composition which we generally call "mud." This kind of insulation may be tested by the fan by wetting it and rubbing on a piece of paper. If a heavy black line is [illegible] the insulation is not genuine [illegible] do not use sockets of this kind. When a soldering iron is touched against such sockets, the insulation will melt.

Another good point to consider on any socket, is the method of anchoring the binding posts so that they will not loosen up. The head of the binding post screw should have a burred edge so that when assembled it digs into the insulation of the base. The binding post nut should not be round, but should be hexagon or have a [illegible] may be tightened up properly after the wire or lug is placed under it.

Another good feature on some sockets is the placing of soft rubber cushions underneath so that microphonic sounds will not develop in the tubes and cause a ringing sound in the phones or loud speaker. [illegible] small type tubes are set on a base board the loud speaker is apt to develop a tremendous howl if the tube elements are started in motion by vibration.

Note the rubber feet underneath the SIGNAL SOCKET which eliminates microphonic noises from tubes. In mounting this socket round head wood screws of number six wire gauge and at least [illegible] inch long should be used.

In the box of the SIGNAL socket there are two brackets for panel mounting. These are not to be used. Also there are two brass machine screws with a washer of brass and one of soft rubber.

Slip the two washers off the machine screw and place them on the wood screws. Then fasten the socket down. Do not run the screws in [illegible] the socket has no play [illegible] to move the socket up and down slightly.

All that is necessary in a good socket, is that the springs make good contact at all times, that the insulation be of genuine bakelite (black or red) that means are provided for making tight connections to the binding posts and that the tube sets solid in the socket form.

The SIGNAL SOCKET has satisfied all of our requirements for a good socket. The price of the socket is very reasonable, and extra equipment comes packed in the box for mounting the socket in various ways.

SEC. HOOVER REVIEWS THE RADIO SITUATION

In view of the very rapid changes in radio technology within the last six months and to give greater clarity to departmental policies, it seems to me desirable to review the situation.

There can be but one point of view in the consideration of radio regulation and development. That is to assure increasing service to the listener. The radio is steadily enriching our homes. More particularly to our farmer folks it is bringing more of those contacts that the town populations have alone enjoyed up to this time. The road of progress is to stimulate the development of the art; to prevent interference with and between broadcasting stations through maintained competition; to secure greater perfection of reception, increase in the number of alternative programs and better programs.

The most difficult problem in radio regulation and development is the distribution of wave length use so as to prevent interference between stations. There are in all 86 different wave lengths available if we keep the stations ten kilocycles apart and stagger the assignment of wave lengths geographically so as to prevent overlap in the area of effective reception. The recent experiment of the department in attempting to increase the number of wave lengths by decreasing the difference to seven kilocycles proved unsuccessful with the present development of instruments.

REAL SUFFERING IS ENDURED IN SILENCE

"My husband is always talking about dying. Is that a sign that he knows that he has some disease which is likely to take him off suddenly?"

Thus writes a worried wife.

Some persons allow themselves to get [illegible] of complaining and prophesying their early death.

Every little ill, ache or pain, [illegible], indicates the presence of some serious affliction.

Always to be suggesting an early [illegible] for their demise seems to indicate that they are seeking sympathy or tolerance for some of their follies or excesses.

The man who is seriously afflicted seldom refers to his condition. He endeavors to drive the thought from [illegible], and certainly does not wish to emphasize his condition to himself by talking about it.

The patient, quiet man who tries to make light of his ailments and keep his family in ignorance of the severity of his symptoms as long as possible is the one for whom there should be felt the greater anxiety.

DAILY SHORT STORY

THE RIDGELY'S HOUSE PARTY

By Elizabeth Moore Joyce

CLARENCE Ridgely attracted [illegible] as a few [illegible] attract bees. A mild-mannered [illegible] with absolutely no per[illegible] he might be termed [illegible] nevertheless con[illegible] of.

Clarence welcomed them all, giving lavishly of his time which was valuable, and of his money of which fortunately he had plenty.

"[illegible]," Horace Holt reasoned with him, "why do you allow all these impossible people to bother you so?"

A Poor Lot

"[illegible] New York [illegible] and the embryo movie star [illegible] oh, that's enough to mention. But why, Ridgely, why do all that kind [illegible]"

Clarence looked worried. "I wish I knew, Horace," he replied. "I don't understand it myself."

Horace Holt laughed. "You're a good old scout, Clarence, too good, [illegible]'s the matter. [illegible] I'm afraid your case is hopeless—unless, there's only one way out of it—marry a sensible woman who will know how to get rid [illegible] all."

[illegible] was anything [illegible] it was only a few months afterward that Horace [illegible] announcement of the marriage of Mr. Clarence Ridgely and Miss Corinne [illegible].

"[illegible]," [illegible] Horace Holt. "At last there's a glimmer of hope for poor old Ridgely."

Shortly after the marriage, Mr. Ridgely [illegible] it proper to give up [illegible] and move to a [illegible] on a fashionable [illegible].

Wife Delighted

Mrs. Ridgely was delighted with the change and spent [illegible] her new home. [illegible] when Clarence came home, he brought with him a foreign-looking gentleman whose name was Dr. Egitz.

Mrs. Ridgely welcomed him with gracious cordiality and the doctor fairly exuded appreciation of his reception.

"My investigations into [illegible] science are having wonderful results," he told his host and hostess [illegible]. "Let me explain to you my [illegible] work."

"Wonderful," Mrs. Ridgely [illegible] after an hour devoted to [illegible] to her guest.

"If you could but know what this evening means to me," he went on. "Appreciation—a chance to express myself before persons of culture. And I must go back from [illegible] to the uncongenial surroundings from which I came."

"Don't go back, Doctor, at least not right away," Clarence urged [illegible]. "We have plenty of room. Haven't we, Corinne?"

"Indeed, we have," Mrs. Ridgely answered sweetly.

After the few days for which Dr. Egitz had been invited dragged on into as many weeks Mr. Ridgely [illegible] a couple more of his [illegible].

It seemed that Miss Shadwick, poetess, had dropped in to Mr. Ridgely's office to ask his opinion about her latest effort. While she was there Mr. Winkle, an earnest youth who could not decide whether he was best suited to be an actor or [illegible] had dropped in to get Mr. Ridgely's views on the subject.

A Busy Day

As it happened to be one of Clarence's busy days he had not been able to give either of his callers a satisfactory hearing before train time and so had invited them to go home with him to dinner.

Later a violent [illegible] came up and both guests were easily prevailed on to remain all night.

"I've quite fallen in love with your wife," the poetess told Clarence the next day. "I believe if I were to stay near her I might write a poem that would [illegible]."

"Then stay with us a while, Miss Shadwick," urged Clarence hospitably and Mrs. Ridgely seconded him [illegible]. "You mustn't miss a chance like that."

"And I'm to be driven out of this [illegible]," groaned Mr. Winkle.

"Not a bit of it, my dear fellow," Clarence assured him. "Both of you run into town and get what you need and we'll turn it into a little house party."

Then shortly after, without warning, a third cousin of Clarence's who lived [illegible] "[illegible] around" drove up [illegible], her bags and baggage and [illegible] made herself known to Corinne.

"Clarence and his mother before him always told me I was never to miss them in my rounds," she explained cheerfully.

Then the Inventor

Clarence came soon but not alone. Mr. Andrews the inventor was with him as well as some luggage belonging to Mr. Andrews.

"I found the poor chap down town sort of blue and down on his luck and brought him out with me. Knew you wouldn't mind. Why, there's Cousin Tessie. Mighty glad to see you, Tessie."

"Quite a nice little house party, Clarence," Corinne told her husband later. "Another young lady might add to it, however, and we've one bedroom left."

"I know the very one," Clarence replied. "Miss Salmon, the actress. I'll call her up and you can invite her out."

"Now," observed Mrs. Ridgely with a smile after the embryo star arrived, "it's my turn."

How it all happened none of the principals quite realized, but in no time Dr. Epitz and Miss Shadwick discovered that they were kindred spirits. [illegible] because they continually found themselves together in sequestered nooks also propinquity is a wonder worker for[illegible].

Under the same conditions the youth who was uncertain as to his future was easily persuaded by the movie star to be that acting opposite her was what he had been made for. The inventor and Cousin Tessie basked in each other's presence until they told Corinne that never again could they face life alone.

Ridgely Dazed

One by one the enamoured couples left the Ridgely home to prepare for future happiness, and Clarence rather dazed by it all told Horace Holt about it. But Horace laughed inordinately.

"Now don't go and get another housefull on your hands," he said.

"Can't do it, Holt," Clarence answered with a puzzled look. "Corinne wants to move back to an apartment. Says she misses the city. We won't have but one guest room then and I can't say I'll be sorry."

"Clarence Ridgely," Horace said between his bursts of laughter, "you must have married a truly wonderful woman."

For Kiddies' Colds

"Just Rub It On"

Mothers who have precious little lives in their keeping realize the danger to delicate stomachs of so much dosing.

That is why so many millions of mothers now depend entirely upon Vicks for croup and children's colds.

There is nothing to swallow—you just rub Vicks over throat and chest at bedtime and cover with a warm flannel, leaving the bed-clothes loose about the neck so that the arising vapors may be freely inhaled. The child is usually better next morning.

Vicks can be used freely and often with perfect safety, even on the youngest member of the family.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

LOTS of people are going back to the old custom of having their marriage license framed. This is a good idea, but the place for marriage licenses is in the book case along with time tables, stock certificates and other funny papers.

IT'S easy enough for the average man and wife to remember they're married without having to look upon the wall for a reminder.

BESIDES, the living room wall is no place for cross-word puzzles.

AND a woman shouldn't hang a marriage license in the dining room, because her husband's liable to choke some night while he's eating dinner.

THERE are other pictures which are just as appropriate, such as a battleship or a jail.

THERE is nothing romantic about a marriage license. That is, not if it has your name on it.

SOME people get married so often that they wouldn't have enough wall space to hang all their marriage licenses.

THE minute you spent three dollars for one of these fight permits your money is gone.

BECAUSE no matter how unhappy you may be, the city will never give you your dough back.

MARRIAGE licenses now-a-days are printed on cheap paper because very few of them are ever kept longer than a year.

THE city should print them on celluloid and then a woman could rub the name of her old husband out and put the new one in.

SHE could continue doing this until she ran out of husbands.

ALL she'd need would be a cup of water and a sponge.

BY erasing it completely, your present husband will never know the names of the other man you've been married to.

HE can spend lots of pleasant evenings guessing who they were.

OF course when one husband is laid off, the wife should be courteous enough to tell him the name of his successor.

BEDTIME STORY

Broadcast Daily Through WNAC

Why Bobbie Named His Spider Arachne

By Foxy Grandpa.

BOBBY had caught a fat little spider and he thought by the way of nature study he would keep it in a box and watch it weave a web.

Now, as you know, Bobby has a great trick of naming everything and the first thing on the program—after the spider was carefully placed in a box which had a tight covering of mosquito netting over it—was to select a name for the busy little insect.

Bobby sat very still for a few minutes watching the spider and then said:

"Can you think of a good name for her, Foxy Grandpa?"

I waited a moment and then replied:

"I've just the name for her."

"What is it?" asked Bobby.

"A Greek name—Arachne," I answered.

"That's pretty hard," said Bobby.

"But it just suits," said I, "and I will tell you why."

"Please do," said Bobby, curling up in the chair, ready for a story.

"You remember Minerva?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," replied Bobby. "The goddess of war and wisdom—who didn't have a father or mother—but sprang out of the head of Jupiter, because they said that all wisdom came from his head."

"Go up number one," I laughed and patted his head.

"Now perhaps you have forgotten," I continued. "But Minerva did not devote all of her time to wisdom and war. She was an inventor."

"Inventor?" exclaimed Bobby.

"Yes," I answered. "Minerva invented the first distaff and spindle. In fact, she excelled in every branch of female industry. She could do the most beautiful embroidery and was very proud of her skill in this fine needlework.

"Now there was a maiden of Lydia who thought she was a very fine weaver. So what did she do but challenge Minerva to a weaving match.

"So Minerva got to work. She weaved and she weaved. And she worked into her weaving the most beautiful designs—the most beautiful that she had ever fashioned. She just laughed when she thought that a mortal had the courage to challenge her—in this her great art.

"But when Arachne brought the fine piece of weaving which she had done and it was placed beside that of Minerva's, Minerva saw at a glance that the earthly maiden had surpassed her in art and skill.

"This made Minerva furious. She was fired with envy and determined to wreak vengeance on this audacious maiden."

"What did she do?" asked Bobby.

"Minerva forgot her manners and her position of goddess. She picked up her shuttle with which she had been weaving and threw it right into Arachne's face.

"This was a frightful insult. Arachne was humiliated and mortified to such a degree that she hanged herself from a beam."

"Oh," sighed Bobby.

"When Minerva saw what she had done she felt sorry, so she changed Arachne into a spider and allowed her to live so that she could weave unceasingly."

"My spider's name is Arachne," said Bobby, smiling up into my face.

UNDERSTAND THE CHILD

By Carolyn Lisberge

Lecturer and Writer on the Training and Education of Children.

"WATCH Dot when she comes home," a mother once requested a woman who made a special study of child training. "She tramps upstairs like a heavyfooted boy. I am continually having to remind her to walk lightly. She tries to heed me and makes a good start. But before she reches the landing she forgets."

When the girl of four and a half returned from her afternoon outing the student of child behavior became friendly with her. She asked her if she could go upstairs with her and see her toys. Delightedly Dot consented and at once made a bound toward the staircase.

'Oh' wait a minute," called her new friend. "Let's pretend we are kittens going up. Do you know what soft toes kittens have? They don't make a sound when they walk." So together the two of them ascended hand in hand, treading lightly.

While this young woman was in the house the child never started upstairs without asking her to "play kitten." She even played the game herself when she went up alone. Naturally it was not long before she had fallen into the habit of treading the stairs lightly, to her mother's delight.

To obtain this result did not take up extra time. Nor was it a strain on the child's nor the grownup's nerves. It merely called for some understanding that would make an appeal to the youngster.

Childhood is playtime. The world of make believe is real to the child. Mothers do not half realize how easily they could get the children to do anything they wanted if they called to their old youth's love of imagining things.

FINANCE

—By B. C. FORBES—

Another merger era is upon us.

Indications are that this year's consolidations will outnumber those at the opening of the century. Most of the big deals then were in the industrial field.

This year railroads, public utilities, mining companies, banks, oil companies, newspapers, magazines, hotels, stores, coal companies, baking companies, sugar companies, chain stores, ice cream and dairy companies, automobile and automobile body companies, copper companies, shipping companies, raido companies, collar companies, ice companies, asbestos companies, outdoor advertising companies, cotton mills, and others have either figured already in completed consolidations or are reported to be arranging mergers.

A similar movement is under way, though not so vigorously, in Britain, Germany and France.

Why this world-wide trend towards bigness in business?

In one sentence, because machinery and rapid transportation and swift communication and expanding population and advertising have brought larger-scale production and distribution and consumption.

This, in turn, has made business so complex that the ablest brains are now necessary to manage a modern enterprise successfully, and only concerns of magnitude are able to pay the salaries which such brains command. In fact, even six-figure salaries are no longer adequate to hire the top-notchers in various industries and in banking; hence the increasing vogue of profitsharing for responsible executives.

* * *

Our war-time experiences gave a tremendous impetus to co-operation and consolidations, for it was discovered then that a maximum of efficiency could be obtained only by large-scale production and handling. Whereas the United States government had formerly set its face—and its laws—against great consolidations in transportation and in other fields, the transportation act of 1920 reversed this policy and specifically laid down that unless the railroads voluntarily arranged to group all our lines into a score of comprehensive systems, the government would undertake this task.

* * *

Another potent influence has been the wonderful results achieved by Ford and other huge motor companies that have proved how prices can be lowered to the public when operations are conducted on a colossal scale.

* * *

Again, the public's imagination has been captured by the limitless possibilities of "super-power," or, as the utility men call it, interconnected power. It is already manifest that 1925 will bring a veritable deluge of mergers among power companies.

Then, big business necessitates big banks. The late James Stillman was the first to see this and to act accordingly. His successors at the helm of the National City Bank of New York are again doing now what he did when "trusts" first began to spring into existence. This institution now has capital and undivided profits of no less than $110,000,000. Hardly a city of any size throughout the country has not witnessed local bank mergers during the last few years.

Stern necessity has brought about newspaper consolidations, all over the land. It now costs so much to produce a first-class daily that only the cities of the largest size can afford to support more than one morning and one evening paper.

And so it goes all along the line—economic reasons have rendered consolidations inevitable.

The next great field to be invaded by big business is likely to be agriculture. We may regret the passing of the country store since the advent of the automobile, and we may contemplate the coming of corporation conducted agriculture with sorrow, but all signs are that the economic trend is in this direction.

* * *

This is not a discussion of the desirability or undesirability of mergers and still-bigger business, but an outline of what is happening and of the fundamental reasons therefore.

PICKS BALDWIN TO LEAD BULL MARKET

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

One of Wall Street's most successful brokerage houses picks Baldwin Locomotive to lead the next big bullish movement. Talk that the stock will cross 200 is heard.

One might not guess this from the poor report just issued, but, after all, that only represents water that has gone by the mill wheel.

A split-up of stock would be likely to follow such a rise as is forecast for the big locomotive company.

For 1924 President Vauclain continued the policy inaugurated the year before of setting up a dividend reserve to care for 1925 dividends at the regular rate of 7 per cent. per anuum on both preferred and common stocks, thus insuring continuance of the regular dividends this year without regard to when conditions in the equipment industry will take a turn for the better. This reserve to provide for dividends in 1925 and totaling $2,800,000 was taken out of surplus and set up as a special reserve, leaving surplus on December 31, 1924, $18,367,268.

Western newspaper observes that a New Englander is now president of the American Telephone Company. President Walter S. Gifford, Salem-born and Harvard graduate, may well be called a New Englander, but Harry Bates Thayer, now Telephone's chairman, and who was Mr. Gifford's predecessor as president, was also a New England man.

"Lest we forget," a few lines about Mr. Thayer will prove enlightening to many. eH was born Aug. 17, 1858, at Northfield, Vt., the son of James Carey Barrell Thayer and Martha Jane (Pratt) Thayer. Both parents were born in Vermont of stock that came to this country in the earliest days.

Harry B. Thayer

Mr. Thayer attended the public schools of his native town and was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1879. He began business life in a savings bank in Northfield, Vt., that same year, and two years later entered the employ of the Bell Telephone System as an employe of the Western Electric Company at Chicago.

Within three years thereafter he was made manager of the company's business in New York, a distinction for a youth of 26, and his progress in the company was continuous. From 1884 to 1902 he was manager at New York; from 1902 to 1906 he was vice-president. In 1907 he became vice-president and general manager, and in 1908, president. In 1909 he was elected vice-president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, and in 1919 became its president.

During practically his entire business life Mr. Thayer has been associated with the development of the telephone.

Mr. Thayer is a trustee of Dartmouth College, a director of the National Bank of Commerce and a director of various telephone companies.

STOCKS HIGHER IN NEW YORK TRADING

Stocks started up well in Wall Street trading and worked higher.

With the lowering of the call money renewal rate to 3 per cent., bears rushed to cover and the scarcity in the floating supply led to a resumption of pool operations on a broad scale.

Practically all groups except coppers participated in the advance.

Buying of the rails was stimulated by a sharp increase in car loadings, but Atchison, which had been bid up 6 points yesterday on rumors of an early declaration of a stock dividend, extended its early loss to 2 points on profit-taking.

American Woolen was hammered down 3¼ points to 49, a new low for the year.

Nash Motors soared 5½ points. General Electric 4. Atlantic Coast Line, American Linseed preferred, Gulf States Steel and Air Reduction moved up 3 to 3½ points.

In Boston Stock Exchange trading Mohawk and Gillette were up a point or more from Tuesday's close at the day's best. Other changes were practically all fractional.

DR. LEVIN TO SPEAK HERE TONIGHT

Dr. Schmarya Levin of Palestine, Zionism's greatest and most forceful exponent, world authority on Jewish needs and problems, philosopher, publicist and noted orator, will deliver his only lecture in New England on his present tour in America at Tremont Temple tonight.

Dr. Levin

A reception in his honor has been arranged by the New England Zionist Region, under whose auspices the distinguished speaker will address his audience on "Roads to Freedom." Boston Zionists are very well acquainted with Dr. Levin, remembering his stirring appeal for the cause when he visited this city three years ago.

Dr. Levin will give his talk in Yiddish. From the advance sale of tickets, Mendel N. Fisher, executive secretary of the Region, reports that a capacity house is assured. All men and women of the city interested in the great cause of New Palestine will attend.

With this announcement also comes the official word from the Zionist bureau that Max Schoolman of this city, active in local Jewish philanthropic work and one of the men who has been particularly prominent in the building of the new Jewish hospital in Palestine, will relate intimate experiences of the Holy Land. Mr. Shoolman made an extensive and thorough study of conditions there.

Mr. Shoolman invested over $250,000 in a building project in Palestine and his undertaking has aroused the interest of Zionists all over the world. His presence added to Dr. Levin's appearance, mark tonight's affair as a red letter one in Jewish circles.

The committee in charge include Elihu D. Stone, president of the Region, chairman; Joseph B. Abrams, secretary; Benjamin Rabalsky, treasurer, and Mendel N. Fisher, executive secretary.

Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams will lead the discussion on the topic, "The Philosophy of Judaism" tonight in the vestry of Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue. A meeting of the combined teaching staffs of Temples Israel and Ohabei Sholem occasions the lecture. All who are interested are invited to attend.

A mass meeting will be held tonight in the main auditorium of the Crawford Street Synagogue under the auspices of the Junior Council of the synagogue in a concentrated effort to encourage religious, social and cultural activity among the young people of the community.

Harry S. Davidowitz, rabbi of the Community Synagogue of Atlantic City, who was a Jewish army chaplain in the World War, will be one of the prominent speakers. As a member of the Rabbinical Assembly of the Jewish Theological Seminary, Dr. Davidowitz is known as a fine orator and a leader in Jewish ministry.

Other speakers will include Rabbi Louis M. Epstein of the synagogue and director of the Junior Council, and Miss Alice Stone Blackwell. Miss Blackwell is an author and active worker in women's welfare organizations.

Pretentious arrangements under the direction of M. A. Margolis have been made for this mass meeting which will be preceded by a musical concert furnished by Ruben Jaffre, violinist; Miss Ruth Shubow, accompanist and Cantor Isidore Adelsman accompanied by Professor Boris Morros.

Officers of the Junior Council of this synagogue are: Samuel A. Margolis, president; Miss Anna Cohen, first vice-president; Paul Fishman, second vice-president; Miss Celia Goldshine, corresponding secretary; Miss Libby Cohen, recording secretary; Miss Eva Baker, treasurer; M. A. Margolis, publicity director.

MAN BUT A PILGRIM ON THIS PLANET

By DR. FRANK CRANE

AFTER all, no better term has been formed for man than that he is "a pilgrim and a stranger" on this planet.

It is easy for us to get egocentric ideas and think the world was made for mankind, and especially for ourselves.

It is well once in a while to take another view of things, to inject ourselves possibly into the viewpoint of other creatures.

So doing, man discovers that he is not regarded with a friendly eye by any other creature that God has made, except, perhaps, the dog.

You have noticed in the woods how all wild things run away from you.

There is probably more life under the surface of the ocean than above it, and yet all that life is alien to man.

Perhaps this fear that other creatures have for us is well founded. We use them for our meat and for our slaves. We take their life, and restrain their liberty, without any maudlin sentiment. Man is the tyrant of the universe.

It is rare to find one who has broken down this barrier and has become friendly with the other creatures, a man of whom the birds are not afraid, and with whom the animals form a companionship.

Daniel Henderson, in a recent book of poems, says:

> "Races whose titles run from God
> Dispute my warrant to the sod!
> I am Intrusion! I am Danger!
> Familiar, but for aye—the Stranger!"

Most animals are shy creatures. Perhaps they have reason for being so. And it takes a good deal of effort to overcome the fear that is inbred in their blood and make them friendly to us.

Have you ever watched a bird eating? John Burroughs tells us of how all birds look up and around between bites. They are looking for possible enemies. Their ancestors have for years and centuries been used to foes, and it takes them a long while to get used to kindliness.

Kindness to all creatures should be taught children. They will gain many human values by being kind to birds and animals, for civilization is founded upon an increase of pity.

Our Traffic Problem? Minute Men Would Encircle Boston With a 2-Deck Boulevard!

FIVE DAYS now have passed since the members of a non-salaried commission filed with the Massachusetts Legislature a report calling for the ultimate expenditure of $25,000,000 for the solution of some of Boston's major traffic problems and up to date there has not been a single demand for the hanging, drawing and quartering of the commissioners!

Which shows two things, among many.

The first is that Boston has grown up, is geting on, is stepping out, is almost ready to do the big things that MUST be done in the only way in which they can be done properly. That is, in a BIG way.

And the second is that Boston has quite made up its mind that the problem presented by the automobile and the motor-truck, in the narrower and busier streets of the city, is one that will not suffer further postponement.

The report of the Special Recess Committee on the Intermediate Thoroughfare, to give the board its full and proper if somewhat clumsy name, is now in the hands of the printer. It is earnestly to be hoped that the order provides for copies enough to place one in the hands of every Bostonian of vision, every enterprising merchant, every public-spirited taxpayer.

One of the most interesting of all the suggestions contained in this report, and it is packed full of meat and substance, is that the Atlantic Avenue structure of the Boston Elevated Railway Company may be used as part of a "second-story" highway, completely encircling that part of the city lying east of Arlington street.

Imagine! Coupes, sedans and motor trucks, whizzing past the South Station and along the waterfront, as high in the air as we now see an occasional Elevated train!

Practically every important city in the land has had to meet the problem presented by the more than 15,000,000 automobiles in the United States. Los Angeles is grappling with it on the basis of a survey made by an expert, requiring ten months and the expenditure of between $30,000 and $50,000. Similar surveys have been made in St. Louis, Atlanta, Philadelphia and other cities. One is now being made in metropolitan New York.

How Boston's problem is accentuated by the historic Common, and the centering of wholesale and retail business in one comparatively small section of the city, was told long ago by the Under Forty division of the Chamber of Commerce, in a report on "street traffic in the city of Boston:"

"In the early days of the city there were wharves along the harbor front, with wholesale houses behind them, as now. Then came the retail stores, and finally the residences, stretching back over Beacon Hill. The space between the wholesale houses and the Common was more than ample for the retail business.

"As the city grew and became more and more crowded, desperate efforts were made to keep it habitable for all who desired to live in it. As the North End was occupied by newcomers, the Back Bay was filled in so as to provide additional space for residences. There was ample room for this district to spread westward, and at that time Beacon Street and Boylston Street were large enough to accommodate all the traffic from the west to the retail centres.

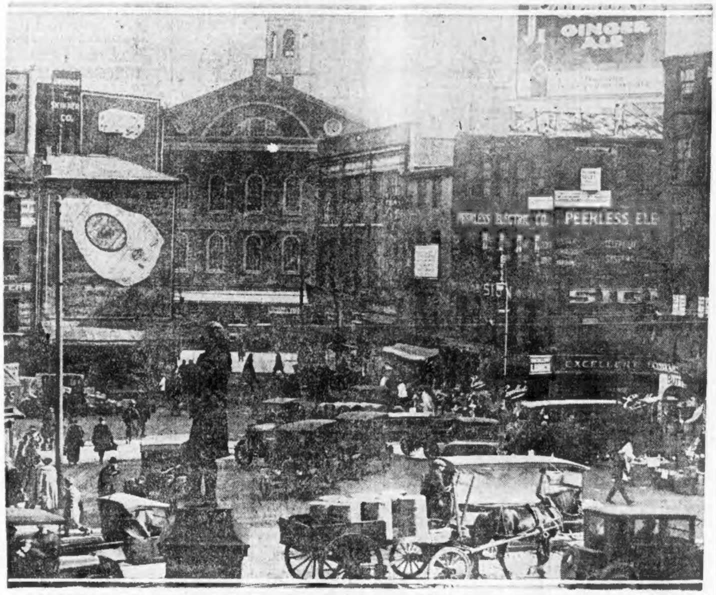
"When the business section became crowded, Fort Hill was removed and the material used to construct new land along the harbor front. Thus all the area east of Beacon and Copps Hills was made comparatively level. This made teaming easy, so that the shops had their warehouses over their offices and found no difficulty in carting their purchased goods in by teams, and their sold goods out again by the same method.

"Once the whole business district was fully occupied, there was only one possible way for it to expand. It was bounded on the west by the Common, on the northwest by two hills, and on the north and east by the river and the harbor, respectively.

"Geographically, it could spread to the south and southwest, but all traffic from the western residence section to the business districts breaks against the Common, flows around it, and tumbles into the whirlpool beyond. There is no broad attractive street to carry the stream to the south and southwest of the present crowded district. Hence, retailers have been afraid to move. They want to be in the whirlpool, not in slack water. Had such a street as described been constructed when the Back Bay was filled in, the present situation might have been very different. As it is, conditions become worse every month. Retailers hesitate to move to the south, and wholesalers continue to store their goods over their offices as did their ancestors. Every day thousands of tons of heavy materials are carted through our narrow streets from terminals to warehouses and from warehouses to terminals. Year after year goes by, and yet new warehouses are not as a rule placed on available sites having spur track facilities.

"To summarize, the present congestion in the business district of Boston is caused by the great number of vehicles and foot passengers, all desirous of moving around in a space far too small to accommodate them. . . ."

WHERE CONGESTION IS SEEN AT ITS WORST



"For years one of the worst congested places in the city of Boston has been the mass of crooked ways between Faneuil Hall and Washington Street.

"We are in favor of a radical reconstruction of streets in that area with the taking of two entire blocks and, as an offset, the recovery of a substantial amount of land which will have large value.

"The plan which we propose is the extension of Brattle Street, from Washington Street to Faneuil Hall, to a width of 100 feet. This will give an adequate entrance to the market and also give to one of our most historic buildings the dignified setting which its traditions demand.

"The widening of Brattle Street, the widening of Exchange Street and the opening up of Dock Square really constitute ONE improvement that will greatly facilitate the moving of traffic to and from both the financial and the market districts.

—From the unanimous report of the Special Recess Commission on Boston's Street Traffic Problem.

Has the situation improved since the above report was penned?

In some respects, a very little; in many respects it has grown worse.

The building of Stuart street was one of the best things that has been done for Boston in a generation. Great warehouses have grown up close to the waterfront and railroad terminals. Retail trade has marched several blocks westerly along Boylston street.

Advances and improvements, to be sure, each in its way, but what has been their effect upon the problem of street traffic conditions?

No more than barely discernible, if that.

There are several automobile today where there was one a dozen years ago, and there are times, it appears, when all of them come to Boston.

The problem presented by the motor-car in city streets is not, as everyone knows, peculiar to Boston. In December last, indeed, Secretary of Commerce Hoover was moved to call a national conference on street and highway safety. The conference was held in Washington and at least one New Englander came home from it impressed by the fact that American cities had met and were meeting their local traffic problems as best they could under the existing conditions, but had "reached about the peak of possibility of further traffic improvements WITHOUT STRUCTURAL CHANGES."

The finding of the Hoover conference was that the only way for a community to "deal effectively with the problems of street and highway activity is to co-ordinate all its efforts in A COMPREHENSIVE TRAFFIC AND THOROUGHFARE PLAN, showing a complete system of traffic ways, parking of automobiles, storage areas and needed street improvements, both within the city limits and within the area of probable building developments outside of such limits."

And this is exactly what the gentlemen of the Special Recess Commission on the Intermediate Thoroughfare have done, for the report they have presented to the General Court in a comprehensive traffic and thoroughfare plan which FACES THE FUTURE.

Consider, for example, what they say on the subject of a two-level street, encircling down-town Boston:

"An ideal layout for down-town Boston would be a wide thoroughfare partly on ground level and partly on causeway, which would completely encircle the portion of the city lying east of Arlington street.

"In our opinion such an encircling street should be on the ground level where intersections are infrequent, and on an elevated causeway where street crossings are frequent; to the end that traffic may circle the city at rapid speed, entering this circular thoroughfare wherever the main incoming arteries intersect it; and leaving it by ramps which would bring traffic into the various down-town districts, such as the financial district, the market district, the retail district, etc., etc. This would tend to eliminate cross traffic from many of the narrow streets of the city, and enable cars to pass rapidly from one part of the circumferential highway to another.

"Downtown Boston is relatively small in area, and the circumferential highway which we have in mind would not be over 4 miles in length, and would pass within 2,000 feet of practically all the important centres of the down-town district.

"It has been suggested to us that the Atlantic Avenue Elevated structure be converted to a viaduct and be made a part of the circumferential highway. This suggestion is being given very careful consideration by this Commission. Such a circular highway would also of necessity involve a viaduct over the tracks in the rear of the North Station."

The Commission urges the building of a new street from the Charles River Dam to Causeway and Staniford streets, at an estimated cost of $1,385,000; the widening of Merrimac Street from Causeway Street to Haymarket Square, $2,125,000; widening of Cross Street from Haymarket Square to Commercial Street, and its extension through private property to State Street, $5,305,000; widening of Brattle Street, $1,190,000; widening of Exchange Street, $1,920,000; widening of Albany Street from Kneeland Street to Broadway, $1,530,000, and the construction of a new street from the corner of Albany and Kneeland Streets to Church Green and Federal Street, at an estimated cost of $7,345,000.

A large order, you see!

Who has drawn it? Who ARE the gentlemen of the Recess Commission?

The chairman is Mr. Henry I. Harriman, who is also chairman of the Metropolitan Planning Division, and his associate members Mr. Frederic H. Fay, chairman of the City Planning Board; Judge Michael H. Sullivan, chairman of the Finance Commission; Colonel Thomas F. Sullivan, chairman of the Boston Transit Department, and Chairman John H. L. Noyes of the Boston Board of Street Commissioners.

The report is before the Legislature, and in the due and ordinary course of events it will be referred to the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs and become the subject of advertised public hearings. In the meantime, its recommendations and the Commission which makes them may properly be the subject of comment.

First of all, the commissioners are UNANIMOUS in their support of the plan here sketchily outlined.

Secondly, it is worth pointing out that while two of the five commissioners are appointees of the Mayor of Boston and among Mr. Curley's advisers, another is none other than the chairman of the "Fin. Com.," appointed at the State House to see that the City Hall behaves itself.

Another record has been broken by this commission in the matter of expenses. It was given an appropriation of $5,000 and has expended only about $2,000 of it. It wants another year in which to complete its study of a comprehensive program for down-town Boston, BUT IT DOES NOT ASK FOR MORE MONEY.

The personnel of this exceptional commission, the meat and matter of its thought-compelling report, the circumstances surrounding it, the gravity of the problem and the tremendous sum called for by the plan now before the Legislature, combine to enlist the attention of every Minute Man in Boston.

The Automobile Show soon will be with us.

The opening of another motor season is merely around the corner of the calendar.

Traffic congestion in these crooked, crowded streets of "old" Boston will be worse before it is better.

SOMETHING must be done, and soon, or visitors from out of town will begin to shun these streets as they would the plague. NO community could afford that.

Wealthiest city in America, second richest trade centre of the Western Hemisphere, foremost educational centre of the United States, commercial metropolis of New England, Boston simply CANNOT AFFORD to temporize longer with this traffic problem.

DO the recommendations of the Harriman Commission offer the best possible solution?

They are worthy of the most careful consideration, at all events, and at the moment they are the only ones before us.

Let no Minute Man be frightened away from them because they call for the ultimate expenditure of $25,000,000.

The Harriman plan provides for the raising from taxes of between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000 annually, the property-takings, construction work and financing to be spread over a period of years.

Twenty years ago, a somewhat similar plan of public improvement, involving, as this does, the suggestion of a double-deck highway, was presented to the people of Chicago, some of whom laughed heartily at the idea of a "boulevard on stilts."

What happened?

Chicago's great boulevard was completed and today, twenty years after the witless scoffed at a street "on stilts," real estate all along its course is "up," on the average, approximately 500 per cent.

There NEVER was a truly GREAT public improvement which, in the course of time, did not more than pay for itself.
